Project AngelBook – Volume X – Parts 1–36

By Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough

This volume is not made up of my own words. There is no original commentary

here, no narrative, no analysis. This is simply me copying and pasting large chunks of text from my bookmarks—pages that were easy to extract, with no

hyperlinks or formatting issues, saved from open tabs and archived corners of the web.

It's messy. It's unfiltered. It's chaotic. But it's valuable.

Each piece inside this volume was bookmarked for a reason. Not always because I agreed with it, but because it felt like a fragment of something larger—an insight, a worldview, a download. This is source material, plain and raw.

Fragmenta Ex Machina isn't about authorship. It's about preservation and system-building. It's about feeding the machine—laying bricks for the Operating System I'm constructing across these books. This is the raw intake

phase. The memory dump. The zero layer.

Later volumes will be cleaner, more refined, more structured. But this? This is the foundation. The ether stream, bound and frozen before it vanished.

So if you're looking for polished prose, skip this one. But if you're here to explore the roots of something much bigger, this is where the signal begins.

Welcome to the fragments.

— Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough Architect of the Machine

Of what import is material wealth to you?

How is your group organized/orchestrated/able to affect change?

Explain alchemy.

When you say become a magician, you mean magick?

What is your IQ?

How did you become a member of your group, or must you be born into it?

Do you have any plans regarding population differences in ability and intelligence?

How do your goals differ from those of your opponents? Do you have opponents?

How correct is the Extraterrestrial Hypothesis?(or are they something else)

Where did we come from?

How would the world differ for the average person if you accomplish everything you want? Would there even be average people?

Who teaches or reveals or instructs your group's "curriculum"? What is the information you have, and how would we go about learning it?

And what would one need to become in order to be a serious asset (even a needed asset) to your group?

Do you have allies? Subordinates? Commanders? How much hire above you does it go?

Do you know?

How can you be sure of anything you believe you know?

We don't diminish the value of material enjoyment, and of course you need some minimum material wealth to sustain your life, provide time to think, grow, etc. It matters a lot.

We primarily use the power of ideas, but not always. Our organization is primarily vested in the preservation of knowledge and forum for discussion that might not go over well in public.

I didn't mean this literally. More like magic is indistinguishable from sufficiently advanced technical skill.

Sufficiently far from the mean that the number no longer means anything - several standard deviations out.

Recruited.

We think that memes like idiocracy have some merit, but are overblown in the context of current and reasonably expected technological advancement that will reverse the trend.

There are a couple of factions in the world that have always believed in preserving a knowledge gap. We are opposed to that.

There is no evidence in support of this.

Don't know.

We don't have an "end game" per se.

The formulation of this question is lacking. We could say yes without saying anything at all, right? By definition.

Often it is passed through families, but not exclusively by any means.

We don't lack needed assets in any significant sense.

We make concerted efforts, but not always unanimously. There is no strict command hierarchy.

The best you can do is examine the evidence.

Hi again.

You do understand that many people do not see those in your position as benevolent, right? You understand why?

You speak of blackmail webs. How does one avoid them?

You state that your group is opposed to the preservation of a knowledge gap, but your own statements about home built nuclear weapons seems to work in direct opposition to that view. Care to explain?

You state that financial collapses are viewed as tools to be used. Are you aware of the lives you risk for such fun and games?

I don't think I like you or your little group; you sound like you want to be the overlords of us all. I'm from a family that fought the first revolution for the idea of freedom. Many in the US are preparing to do that again. As time goes on, it seems more and more necessary. Can you just leave us and our freedom be, or will you continue to meddle in our economy and government?

We are aware of this.

Often, if you seek power, you will be framed even if you do not engage in blackmail worthy behavior.

If this doesn't work and you are sufficiently threatening, you will be executed.

If you want to exercise power in the world, you must abide by reality, and therefore the law of the jungle. If you can't wave a big stick, don't threaten a big animal.

We don't do this or encourage it, but it does happen.

Also... When you say "preservation of a knowledge gap" and that you oppose it, how big is the gap? And by "oppose", do you mean simply not getting in the way of people seeking that information, not actively preserving the gap, making the info available to some or all who seek it, or actively disseminating it?

Because there's a difference between letting someone find out that there's no Santa, and running up to 6 year olds in the street and screaming that Santa doesn't exist.

Essentially, sharing certain info can border on abuse. You know that already.

So how do you plan to close the knowledge gap?

Also, you know what I mean by average people you cheeky little sumbitch. ;)

Do you plan on engineering a future world populated by what society would now classify as "elites" (in multiple respects) ...and what would happen to those society now deems the average, working class all American pleb ...the "little guy" ... The not so bright?

Would they become an underclass? Would they be transformed somehow? (You allude to technology and transhumanism) Or would they simply be eradicated in the world you envision?

No

Freemasons are kind of like an umbrella group for dissident minds. Neutral meeting territory. Think of the lodge as equivalent to a meeting ground governed by gentlemen's agreements, like lords meeting in the middle before battle to discuss options before commencing with bloodshed.

Surely if your goals are good and correct and you're a "good guy" it would be A simple thing to persuade a sizeable chunk of the population to your cause.

Thank you for answering my questions. Even if you are full of shit (and I'm inclined to think you're not) it's been genuinely fun chatting.

You're more interesting than most people I come into contact with.

You have not really thought about what all such a process entails.

What if we seize power and push out the blackmail network. They won't just go quietly and we don't have the means to kill them all overnight, nor even consensus that we should if we could.

So you are dealing with a broad and organized network of malcontents resisting your efforts to improve, plus the government is highly unstable because people have no reason to trust it and are predisposed to revolution.

This isn't a trivial exercise you are proposing.

Address this question please.

The major power factions in the world are analogous to dark priests, good priests, kings, and (in theory) meritocracies.

Dark priests - these people believe that beauty emerges from contrast. Evil is necessary for good kind of thing. They are not necessarily pro-evil, but pro-contrast.

Kings - generally less intelligent than dark priests. Much of their code of behavior derives from a belief in the past that you need a slave class to sustain an enlightened class.

Meritocracy - they believe in something similar to democratic rule, but only with votes for the initiated, because the masses are hopeless.

Us - we're more interested in the emperor without clothes effect. The exercise of power has always come with a stifling of dissent and dangerous dips into psychosis. We try to undermine this tendency more than anything else.

People are assassinated if they are considered extreme threats to the system. You don't have to be overtly threatening. A particularly damning piece of journalism or a simple Artificial General Intelligence doesn't exist now. However, we know it will in approximately 20 years. How does this economy or way of living survive the advent of such a technology?

Further, how do we survive the interim where strong Artificial Narrow Intelligence begins to obliterate white collar jobs?

The goal is 0 unemployment and to lay in green pastures, but how are you all planning to get everyone through the darkness to the new sunrise?

We are inclined towards socialization of novel input resources while leaving most of the existing way things work untouched, including existing ownership claims.

If we can generate say 1,000 times as much energy as the world currently uses, we can give you an equal allotment of it to trade. You retain individual or corporate ownership of means of utilizing this energy, the derived products, the value of your labor, etc.

My own explanation of why the Chinese did not do more given their intellect is that people are ruined by success (they want what worked yesterday) and a powerful, centralized state misinterprets innovation as a threat. Therefore, censorship is actually a major self-limitation. I think China would be much better off without censorship, but that would be too scary for the Politburo. Am I on the right track?

To add to that, I concluded that China is approaching a point where Deng-ism has done all it can, and now the center needs to back off and trust the ordinary Chinese person more. They are at the point where they need something like American or Enlightenment values to get to the next stage. But everything in their culture militates against this, and Brother Eleven appears to have been moving strongly in the wrong direction, ensuring future problems and stalled growth. This strengthens the chances of a military adventure or scapegoating foreigners.

Am I wrong? Is there a way for Xi to both crack down and facilitate growth?

You can enumerate the possibilities for growth:

innovation, foreign plunder, domestic plunder

Obviously on the first is viable in the long term. Is Xi up to the task? Possibly, and shows more inclination than his American counterparts these days.

There are also some implied ideas behind that person's posting.

They are not terribly interested in our definitions of good or evil, they seem to be more interested in making sure there is some sort of order in the world and the current power structure fits that bill regardless of how it is achieved.

They don't seem to be opposed to the idea of us tackling corruption, but I get the sense that they might step in or otherwise dissuade us if we were to embark upon a path which would descend into the kind of chaos that would ensue should all CF related dirt make it into the public awareness.

Order must be preserved no matter what method is used. That might seem anathema to the idea of trying to root out corruption, but if you zoom out and take a longer look, it might be better than the alternative; CF dirt leaks, all holy hell breaks loose across the globe and we descend into another dark age, or worse.

In light of that mentality, one can see how such people as the Sorosians would be allowed to develop as we have come to understand their network and operating principles.

>>80745633>the powers of the mind and more extensive than most realize.

This goes back to the mystery schools and the odd things that highly advanced science (quantum theory for example) has some astonishing similarities to what gurus and others such "enlightened" individuals espouse but when they are then perverted or misunderstood and turned into religions.

I've always defined a religion as "the politics of spirituality," in that organizations made by men, generally tend to devolve into self-serving bureaucracies.

There are a few notable exceptions, but generally anywhere you see a concentration of "power over the people," you will find those who look to exploit that power for personal gain and they hijack ideologies which were originally meant to help open the minds of those following said ideology.

All religions are really meant to be a path toward personal enlightenment, a greater understanding of one's connection to the universal mind also carries with it a greater ability to access higher functions that have the appearance of "psi."

Ignoring the potential war possibilities, the second question we should be asking is the incoming inevitable monetary system collapse.

I heard that either World Bank/IMF had a technology to imprint gold into paper currency to back it with real value which makes a lot more sense as a system, which would be a rational system with fractional reserve banking removed in the future, my main question however is what do you see happening when all the system collapses on this debt?

Ideally we would just protest - destroy the central banks and go for the paper gold but a lot of people both poor and rich will be unhappy about this. Writing off all the debt would be needed as well but that would mean some nations get a massive advantage.

Do you or your fellow insiders have a solution to this problem? Because I am not so optimistic to think that bankers and politicians will just willingly step down.

>>80753803>inevitable collapse

The system is rigged. Spontaneous collapse is the not the nature of a rigged system. Instead, a slow grinding down is what you can expect.

As to gold fetishization, we strongly discourage this. You're trying to stop the bankers from printing freely, but they do this to plug preexisting flaws in the system. It's often presented as if printing money is the flaw in the system, but this isn't the case. You guys are advocating removal of a bandaid and calling that a cure.

I agree the system is rigged and printing is not the problem itself, however if you leave control of the printing to a nation, then you merely trust that the nation is question is printing it according to the rules. Virtually the only solution would be for every nation to have a single printing press for their currency in some point of the globe and all nations having a representative to check the legitimacy of the printing process. This would be nice but I just can not see it happening.

Try defining what constitutes legitimate printing.

It's been used to both good effect and bad. Governments used this process to fund the building of infrastructure that leapfrogged many societies into large middle classes, for example.

Today it is, as most can see, largely an aimless enterprise that is skipping around plugging holes in a system that is grinding to a halt.

You speak of helping us come to an eventual new, better, way of governance.

I've been toying with economic theory, struggling to come to something that promotes growth like fiat, but reproduces the success of the petrodollar.

The biggest problem is making it globally used. A resource that every nation needs in order to function. Demurrage won't work on a large scale, gold standard won't work on a large scale (finite resources), fiat is prone to extreme greed and manipulation. It needs to be something that allows the least developed countries compete globally with the most developed.

What about an energy based currency? Whether it's coal, oil, Nat gas, or labor?>backed by labor?

We already do this. We give china dollars, and they give us cheap labor.

Every nation needs energy to do work.

You can't tell me our current system is the best we can do.

>>80758131

The currency manipulation is an effort to patch holes in a system that engenders systemic bankruptcy.

You're right that energy is the controlling influence on economic outcomes.

Changing the "backing" of the currency doesn't change the underlying tendency to bankruptcy. Your redesign has to promote wealth generation in a markedly better way than what we have now.

I've been thinking about how people could all be individually sovereign and independent we could either completely modify our energy input... like run our bodies on a different source. Look at how much energy goes into food production, and most of that is to satiate our endless desires for novelty. If we could find a way to sustain our lives without a need for the system...? What? A few thousand watts of solar panels at about $1/watt off ebay, $500 of golf cart batteries, an inverter, a reverse osmosis water purifier and requisite source, computer with internet connection for access to the world's knowledge, a shed full of tools; the hardest thing now is food. With automated farming, could one have a nice automated greenhouse? Coupled with a diet based on biological needs. Hunting rifle for game, rod/nets for fishing. Can't support many people with hunting, though. Humanity went through that before the neolithic age. Can we go back to a simpler life but now with technology?

You said already, that power is no longer constrained to the amount of humans.

Turning energy into wealth in the minds of the top earners could have a profound Shockwave effect on our economic system.

I'm not saying there won't be crises, I'm saying that an energy based system would more accurately reflect the potential of a nation to produce.

Example: financial institutions are representing larger and larger portions of GDP, while being exposed to legal, yet self destructive banking practices. They don't accurately reflect potential for work in cases of widespread corruption.

Ok, so what does that leave us with? I tend to think that you mean that on the macro scale we need more energy.

Oil & Fossil Fuels > no for obvious reasons, may be necessary for air/space travel for a while yet.

Nuclear (fission) > requires massive scale and biggest problems are the actual amount of uranium on earth and disposal of waste with destructive potential for 10k year scales.

Nuclear (fusion) > not yet feasible.

Wind > can't replace baseload power generation, can change weather, not feasible on large scale.

Solar > still not very efficient, but much improved. Biggest problem is that all solar cells are made from silicon wafers just like cpus, this takes tons of energy and requires massive economy of scale to barely break even. Can't replace baseload power.

Now here's where it gets a bit tinfoil-hatty:

Right, so you know why they let Hillary off the hook then?

Several reasons.

For one, her server was state sanctioned as an intelligence operation (intentionally leak some legit and fake intel). The complete lack of security should have raised the alarms on this one for you. The notion that she was trying to hide something with a private server wide open is absurd on its face.

Secondly, the Clintons possess an extensive set of blackmail. You all know about Bill's trips to pedo island. He's got a list of names of others that did the same and a whole lot more. Taking down the Clintons starts a process similar to pic related.

To be clear, I am not saying the Clintons are not hiding things. The point is that the use of the server wasn't the methodology employed to hide things.

Think more along the lines of state sanction to leak disinformation as a cover for pay-to-play schemes and selling national security secrets.

In relation to events that took place in that past which left us nothing but the lore of civilizations:

Is there any planning for black swan events by those currently in power?

If not, is there a way in which this planning can be goaded or otherwise made to be considered by those who do have the ability to deal with such a potential event?

Does black team have such an event within their considerations?

Their grip on power is rather tenuous. The effort to retain it consumes most of their ability. The idea that there is some hegemonic order that you cannot challenge is nonsense.

Knowing this, there is little you can do to goad them into diverting resources (mental and otherwise) to serious problems, because they don't have any significant excess to spare.

Correct. Think how much easier it would be to placate the masses with even inflation neutral wage increases. People can feel progress even if it isn't real. Yet, the system doesn't even deliver this. Consideration of these sorts of things show you that they are exercising control in more of a reactive rather than proactive fashion.

Will Hillary really win the election?

The elections are rigged, but the outcome has to be plausible in this sense: everyone can feel that it is rigged as long as they are not sure that everyone else doesn't feel the same way. It's OK for the whole population to know they are being had, as long as they don't know that everyone else feels the same way (then fear dissipates and action follows). So, Hillary can only be selected in scenarios where it isn't obvious that it is obvious that it was rigged.

It wasn't planned initially. Go look at things people like Sy Hersh or Gen Flynn have to say about how the Syria intervention went down. I do, in fact and yes, we have talked about this before.

It is something I've been concerned with for some time since I learned about it and began thinking about what the implications might be should such an event occur once more.>We have developed strategies to mitigate the impact of these in the future, but they are not currently in use. The same can be said for most problems of this nature. So it's been discussed, and possibly planned for but no action has been taken on those plans.

Actions are not likely to be taken due to the majority of the energy by governments (or private coprs) being funneled in to maintaining their own personal power base against the rising tide of resistance to the exercise of said power.

Many of us here, and I presume among your group, have a natural "immunity" to such controls and as a result represent outliers for which they have little means of dealing with.

Until such a point is reached that we become a threat to the overall system and we are dealt with in order to keep the boat from being rocked.

So, what we need to do, if I understand correctly, is find a means to make the desired changes to the system from within the same system that has been used by black team in such a way as to not introduce oscillations that might topple the entire edifice.

Is this a viable avenue of consideration?

Yes. There is no pointing in fantasizing about "resets," but you can entertain even more dramatic changes than that - just in a productive, intentional, controlled way.

This is largely correct. It's almost inherent to their method of governance. When you operate in in such a way as to stifle even internal dissent you will become unhinged over the long run.

You have biological reasons for this too, not just social ones. Familiar transfer of power, inbreeding, the differential susceptibility to syphilis before a cure was available, etc., have all engendered a quickening of the insanity / psychosis of these people.

Those who run the world today had parents and grandparents that were literally insane, not just in the sense of their ideas, but because of a biological infection. It's hard to comprehend for ordinary people, but extremely important in explaining how we got to where we are now.

>Natural causes for the first collapse (asteroid impact)

This would relate to something in the true history of which most of the population is unaware?

What were are taught of human history is a construct of the ancestors of those in power now.

Are there any ways someone who is not not privy to the resources of your group or others to verify for themselves what aspects of true history have been changed?

For the most part, the flow of particular facts is unencumbered. It's big pictures that are suppressed.

You can go read the geological literature and deduce global catastrophic events 10-15k years ago, or look at the evidence of water erosion in Egypt combined with knowing there hasn't been enough rain there since they were allegedly built.

All of this information is available to your scholarly pursuits, but you should take care not to accept unfounded assumptions.

Basically, do the opposite of the way they taught you history. Most people get big picture ideas but very few facts to back them up. You want many, many facts and few big ideas in proportion (or you're probably reaching for conclusions without much surety).

I do understand the 2nd law of thermodynamics and why some power generating ideas are not feasible, so I don't think that was the cause of the thread shut down.

Or do you mean that there are generators which are much more efficient or is it the distribution of electricity which can be more efficiently manged?

We lose a lot of energy merely to the resistance of the means by which we currently distribute that power.

Yes, but they don't exist. The mysteries of the past are related to consciousness, the manipulation and suppression of it for power and control, and these sorts of related things. Not alien technology that makes you superman.

I am thinking that if that bit of information were to become common knowledge, then that would eliminate, or at least greatly reduce, the ability of black team and others to keep the illusion of scarcity in place.

So you are referring to entirely different means of power production than are currently in place?

Something that produces results in miniature, or a prototype, that could be easily scaled up for mass use?

I'll illustrate an example using only known, public technology:

Combine an elevator (>ability to run power cables to the ground) with the unlimited real estate in space (>100-1000x concentration power from cheap mirrors) and you can drop power generation costs to about 1/10th of a penny per kWh for something on the order of 18TW of generation (100x reduction in cost of energy supplies) and you have no scaling limitations (until you get several orders of magnitude beyond what we currently use anyway)

All of this can be done with current technology and engineering ability to bring global GDP per capita above $1 million within 10-15 years.

As to your racial inquiries, intragroup heterogeneity is much, much larger than intergroup heterogeneity. In this sense, it's not a particularly useful construct.

If you really want to pursue questions like this, you'll find that intergroup heterogeneity is often driven by intent and ideas more so than biological accident. For example, think of the selection mechanisms in place during the migration from Europe to America - only particular subsets of the population left: the more adventurous, rebellious, independent, risk-prone people. There's a far more significant difference in early American immigrants as compared to those who remained in Europe than say between whites and Asians or blacks.

What do you know that you find most gratifying?

It's important to create disincentives towards your own failure as well as incentives for others to accept your success.

You will best realize your ability to influence the world through the hard work of learning and applying tangible, technological achievement to subduing nature, coupled with an acceptance of reality - i.e., rejecting the illusion of a civil society in favor of the law of the jungle, but without falling off the deep end to mad max fantasies.

Do I know things I wish I didn't? It's hard to say the ignorant life is better not living it, but certainly a lot of knowledge is very burdensome.

Okay so the basis of the Christian religion is of-and-about teachings of a single guy's subconscious view of the world. Based on your description your group studies the bible in an extent that you believe this random guy writing a stream of consciousness is deemed important to learn from. Were the writers of the bible part of an ancient, similar group which delved into orchestrating society? This may not be that much of a low probability as a recurring theory is that religion was made for purpose of early government.

Yes

Careful though - religion has been used as both revelation and concealment of mystery.

Those factions you discussed previously (Dark Priests, Good Priests etc), which one is Elon Musk a part of, if any?

Elon Musk is very much a distraction. Rockets are not a viable means of harnessing space, nor even the best we have available. Electric cars have just as many problems as they solve and batteries are an awful way of storing energy.

Do you agree with the notion that the decline of America to serve the interests of the many instead of the select few has been in decline since his role in the foundation and presidency of the United States? He strikes to me the only true American leader who commanded respect from the majority around him. Lincoln and JFK could be considered in the same vein, but the workings underneath were too entrenched and as a result were killed.

Do we need another Washington-esque leader to break this cycle the current regime is spinning? Someone that is highly respected, yet understands how the game is played, that the elite fear him and the public admire?

A major error in the historical canon is to view the revolutionary struggle as completed at the end of the war, when in fact only a temporary and partial victory was secured.

Yes - it doesn't have to be a single person, the revolution that he was at the forefront of was not, but you do need highly concentrated extraordinary ability.

>>80885258>you do need highly concentrated extraordinary ability.

Any abilities in particular?

Most people seem quite content with things the way they are because they are unable to realize that events they aren't directly tied to can still have consequences in their lives.

The ones who are discomfited by what they see in the world are the ones who understand unintended consequences.

We are now at a point in history where one person (or a small group of people) can accomplish much more than larger groups due to force multipliers (as we've discussed in relation to the meme team of /cfg/) and the power of ideas.

You've mentioned alternative armaments, other than the aforementioned memes, can you give some examples?

Look up the story about how an individual or small team individuals used sniper rifles to knock out a series of transformers and power to millions of people. Not suggesting you do this, but just trying reorient your mind to the physical reality that there exists small, readily accessible ways to exert a tremendous amount of power. Your ability to do this is going to grow with the hard work you do educating yourself, and it is important not to neglect the development of these abilities if you want to grow your agency in the world.

Do jews play disproportionate roles in finance? Sure, but at the same time non-jews made it that way because their power base didn't accept usury and usury was useful to the kings.

So, something like that actually happened?

I know it's a possibility that ~2 dozen well trained snipers with the proper knowledge could take down the national grid (less Texas) almost instantaneously, but I was unaware that something similar had actually been carried out.

So, there is more than just the realm of ideas in which the 'average Joe' could do to affect change?

Hm, I would guess that the trick is in being able to discern these points of attack as it were, not necessarily meaning a physical attack upon a person or object, but rather actions that can be taken in the daily world of off the net.

How does one go about being ale to spot these points?

I'm thinking about how loggers will bring a specialist in to clear up a log jam. They examine the jam and determine the key log to take out which clears the blockage. What you're referring to seems similar to me in that we are attempting to shake the mass idea that there is little everyday people can do to fight against the 'evil gubberment.'

That is an example of a log jam in public opinion, if the key log can be located, and dealt with then the flood that had been held back will be let loose and people will realize that they can make a difference despite what 'conventional wisdom,' says about a situation.

Good analogies. You'd be well-served to keep these principles in mind going forward.

Hi there.

I've read all your threads so far and I'm pretty excited to see you posting again today. I read Julian Jaynes' The Origin of Consciousness in the Breakdown of the Bicameral Mind last year while I was pregnant with my son. (I actually read parts of it aloud to him lol). I'm very surprised to hear someone else mention it. I found an article mentioning it on the Nautil.us blog and was so excited, because it had a lot of the piece of the puzzle I felt I'd been missing. I've been studying consciousness and reality for over half of my life and it was the best thing I've read so far.

Here's my question:

Can you please elaborate on the second life on earth scenerio you described in a previous thread?

I became Christian after having become well-informed (and well-practiced) in the occult (particularly Gurdjieff and Castaneda's works) and realized that Christianity was the most complete and correct explanation of reality. Both symbolically and literally (when read in the proper context). So this is my main interest. From my experiences and studies I have concluded that belief in Jesus is the only way out of the hole, so to speak.

Heaven is within you, right? Ascendancy comes from within. We were never talking about physical death and going off to a magic place. The enlightened mind experiences two births, first the physical, and the second into consciousness, and some might carry the metaphor further to subsequent rebirths by taking the sacrament of knowledge; seek until you find, and then keep seeking.

Is the Cometa Report simply state sanctioned cointel?

What did you think of Hitler? What did he and/or the people controlling him want to accomplish? What was the holocaust?

Do you support international interdependence and cohesion or independent nation states or something else?

What is Tesla's secret of the 3, 6, and 9? has it got anything to do with your group?

Yes.

Hitler was created pretty directly and overtly, and a lot this process had to do with consolidation of power. Look at the long arc of the 100 years before WW2. Europe was highly tumultuous in the second half of the 19th century especially, and this is very much glossed over in your history lessons - here you'll find the original provocateurs and agendas.

Interdependence shouldn't ever be your goal, but there is nothing wrong with cooperation.

This is speaking to the idea that AGW is largely propaganda, though we could certainly do a much better job of taking care of our environment.

Most environmentalism is used as a dividing tool in order to keep people squabbling about meaningless aspects of larger problems.

There's plenty of reason to believe in anthropogenic global warming, although the measurement of the effect and the noise level in the data are on the same order of magnitude. That makes calculation of optimal response a highly speculative venture at present.

More to your point, there are much better ways to deal with it than are offered to the public, i.e., build a sun shield rather than cut off carbon energy sources.

If every individual is strong and independent and takes care of themselves then everyone is taken care of. But what of those who don't, can't and won't take care of themselves? Do they need to be destroyed? Allowed to die out? Taken care of by others?

Have you played Assassin's Creed or are you familiar with the main overarching themes? If so, what do you think of it?

The better off your society is, the less burdensome it is to take care of those who cannot care for themselves. It's a lot easier to toss a penny out the window than a gold bar, and in this sense the moral calculus shifts decidedly towards some sort of safety net. At the same time, it's not hard to see why people view the growth of social services as a threat in the current circumstances - squeezing of the middle class from the top and the bottom.

Where islam prevails no progression in possible nor a just society but they have soon almost 2 billion people who simultanesouly praying and are on a subconscious level strong conected. What do you make of the meme that a long time ago, intelligent/enlightened beings, usually from the sky, came to unenlightened or savage humans and showed them light/fire/knowledge/truth and lived among them/ruled them for a short time and then left, often promising to return at some point?

Sometimes there's a subplot of the beings being divided and some ruling the humans as gods/kings/slavemasters and some (often just one) gifting enlightenment to humans and being reviled and or punished afterwards. i.e. Prometheus.

Metaphorically true. Previous civilization, collapse, re-emergence, a splintering of "gods" (conscious people), and a war between them.

That's basically what I figured.

Do you think the re-emergence phase was a new and separate genesis of consciousness among the native population that emerged after the previous peoples were lost, or was it the same people from the previous civilization that somehow saved themselves returning as gods to govern/nurture the newly born "savages" and rebuild? If that's the case, then it doesn't seem implausible that the main splintering and struggle between "gods" over what to do about/with/to/for the "humans" would have continued through to modernity.

Which could mean that the mystery schools and groups like your own could descend literally or in spirit/ideology/knowledge from the previous civilization.

Which could explain why some of the darker groups seem to believe in an inherent, inherited right to power for themselves and their bloodlines only, among other things.
So I suppose the question is... does membership in your group tend to run in families?

Yes, but not as a rule. Proximity to highly conscious individuals tends to generate the same, as well as environments conducive to individual growth. You won't be more or less welcome because of an ancestor (for us), just more or less likely to develop.

I understand. As Milton said, "The mind is its own place, and in itself can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven", right? C.S. Lewis had a few interesting ideas on how an eternal consciousness would be pretty awful if someone still held on to immature feelings like jealousy, for example, and how much time could exacerbate negative thought habits. I've been spending years trying to retrain my mind to redirect these negative neural pathways I've forged.

So if we are made in the image of God, and God is triune, is it safe to assume that the idea of the Athanasian Creed can be applied on a practical level in which the Holy Spirit living in us equates to a third voice that mediates for a higher level of consciousness? I suppose you could also refer to it as a person's conscience? I've thought about those things before after reading Jaynes' work.

One more question:

What can I do for my son to help him the most? He is almost 8 months old. I was thinking of homeschooling him. I just want him to have the best experience of reality possible.

It's probably better for you to think in terms of supplementing formal education than replacing it. There are merits to participation, i.e., social interaction and even experiencing the negativity of it. You can't shield a person from all things bad, but you can intervene to limit the more fatal outcomes.

Russian - US military relations are not bad at all right now. Political tension is very high, but unlikely to translate into significantly hotter conflict than proxy wars. Even there, the trend is towards deescalation (i.e. Pentagon cooperating with Russia to stabilize Syria).

the US be? Would we see an audit of the FED? Would war (civil or otherwise) be inevitable?

I realized that sovereign debt doesn't affect the US too much because of its role as a reserve, but losing its reserve status is kind of uncharted territory. What would stop other nations from dumping American assets?

It's one of those things with the potential to radically change the world. Breakdown of international trade, deep and long depressions throughout major economies, potentially catastrophic rise of military conflict, etc.

You should focus more on using the power of the world reserve currency for good rather than ending it.

There was a compromise put into place after WW2 between USA and Russia. In return for acquiescing to the US having the world reserve currency, USA was supposed to act as a world bank for global infrastructure development.

The same agreements were made in preparation for the fall of the USSR. In both cases, they went unfulfilled.

This remains the basis of Russia's demands, however they are preparing for an end of US financial hegemony after being crossed twice already.

Sorry for the multiple questions but I found this thread late.

1. What should I focus more on right now, paying my debts off entirely assuming some system remains in place during the collapse or should I just focus on toiletries, protection, and resources?

2. Is it possible to join the higher level? How do we wake ourselves up to that sort of level?

3. If Martial Law is a worse case scenario, just how bad will the BLM fueled race war become? Are we talking close to Purge level as a method of population control and to prevent unity among us?

4. Are the elite an actual satanic cult or is are they actually trying to bring about the end times from the book of revelation? Basically, where would Biblical prophecy tie into this? Is it just there so many people accept their fates assuming it was meant to come to pass?

The best planning you can do for mad max scenarios is help make sure they never happen. Second to this would be learning to survive in such a scenario, but only because education is generally good for you - not because it is likely.

There are not many actual satanists among the elite. They like this perception because it induces fear and inaction, or chasing ghosts.

Yes, it's true that poor behavior is endemic, from theft all the way up to child rape. It's better described as degeneracy and perpetuation of blackmail rings. Hardly any of them think something along the lines of "evil is actually good, the masses got it backwards."

This was only a superficial approach but can you clarify the connection of the name of your organisation and this mosaic?

2: Do you know who is behind the cicada3301 programm is and if yes who?

3: You said aswell that "God is on earth" as i read (not finished yet) "The Origin of Consciousness..." which is by far one of the most impressive books i have ever read. What is your definition of "God" ? Is it a special form of divine knowledge/consciousness or is it metaphorical as consciousness itself?

3: Who was the father of Jesus Christ?

4: Is it his bloodline that enabled him to get to this enlightened stage of consciousness?

Would please tell me more about his abilities and why he is of central meaning for your organisation?

5: Are you the same person as the last 8 threads?

6: Is it your official task to help us to ascend?

7: Why you and your organisation are thinking that the agency we would get would use it for the case of the good priests and not for some other fraction?

8: Do the other fraction consider themselves as "good" as well?

The images contribute to the overall message.

You should learn to say multiple angles at once. Symbolism is an induction into this skill. In terms of the Christian religion, the symbol associated with consciousness is heaven, not the deity.

Bloodlines are a bit overhyped. Think more in terms of correlation than causation. If you are raised by wealthy people, you tend to be wealthy. This kind of an effect.

Yes, yes.

There is no doubt that some people are less inclined to do good, but we view bad outcomes as largely a result of squelching dissent involved in more traditional modes of governance, rather than inherent to human nature.

Especially with our dumbass president and a crucial presidential election coming up in less than 2 years.

War on drugs is a policy of the US government related to securing the status of the dollar.

It isn't simply a petrodollar. One of the techniques for adjusting or maintaining value is controlling the volume and price of black market drugs. Most of this profit flows into large banks, not the hands of drug dealers or cartels.

You also get good ways to fund sanctioned and unsanctioned black projects and other benefits of this nature.

If you are who you say you are , you should be way smarter than myself so you know this

Was the plan concentrating the intelligent in the prosperous countries? but even then since the core of the system is anti intellectual, at some point it would have need to be stopped for it not to be forcefully changed by itself since it goes against its own supposed goal or is the ideal world a world of a group of complete "autists" who roam aimlessly in a pseudo ivory tower? its kinda hard to define perfection after all. Wouldn't this also go against Darwin?

Plus did no one visit third world countries to see first hand its inhabitants before making any decisions?

Is it the miles of red tape by nuclear regulatory agencies?

From what I can gather it seems like a really great long term source until others are developed.

Thorium isn't just a meme. There is more energy content in thorium in coal than there is from burning the coal itself. You can preprocess coal to extract thorium and then burn it. Very wasteful stuff we're doing.

The lack of development of safe nuclear reactors is largely due to design criteria being selected to produce bomb material during the cold war.

Do you occasionally drop hints in the /cfg/ thread to provide clues for the anons to follow up on when they're close or at a seeming impasse?

The Chinga meteorite is what you're referring to that was the cause of the prior loss of consciousness.

Does your group estimate that it may have risen prior to that and also been wipe due to some sort of similar occurrence?

Should something similar to the Carrington event occur today, what do you estimate the consequences to be?

Are you familiar with Stavros Tassos' work regarding the earth being a stress engine rather than a heat engine?

No, I just offer tips in these threads.

We are splinter group of the mystery schools that is about 3000 years old. Possible that something similar existed before, but there is no unbroken line.

There are a wide variety of highly catastrophic possibilities, but we don't see any that can't be addressed with robust economic development over a decade or two.

I'm not familiar with Stavros Tassos. I'll take a look at his work and get back to you on that in the future.

That makes sense. "thesis, antithesis, and synthesis" from the Hegelian Dialectic. We must combat this with taking down Hillary and those involved on our own soil, and NOT with war.

Both Hillary and Donald support the new shift in geopolitical strategy. As you know, Hillary can be roughly described as a neocon and Donald has advocated putting a lot of boots back on the ground in the ME even before the groundwork started to be laid for the public to accept this.

This is similar to Romney and Obama both playing up Russiophobia in 2012. Both major candidates will always support the establishment geopolitical thinking. This is the nature of your rigged system.

Opposition in the form of "we don't like you" is not worrisome at all to them. Someone like Sanders gets a lot of public support, but he's also a rather feeble mind and only advocates policy that was crafted for him. Anyone operating within the Overton window in this way isn't actually a threat, even if they are "genuine" opposition.

But you can find the official report ONLINE confirming victims were tortured!!

It doesn't take many people actually reading the documents for the rumor mill to light on fire and the "organic" opposition to blow up.

We're currently projecting the US public will be ready to return to good governance within a decade. We think within a decade of that you'll see real median incomes of $500,000/year. If the public is responsible enough to accept a reasonable portion of that going towards mitigation of society-wide catastrophic events (Yellowstone, solar flares, asteroid protection, robust protection against pandemics, and so on) then we think this will result in a self-sustaining shift towards a much more enlightened society. Perhaps 25 years from now you'll have life expectancy increasing at a rate of at least 1 year per year.

Yes, plus we think a major event here is survivable on a large scale anyway. If your energy throughput is high enough, you don't really need a particularly habitable planet in the way we think of current requirements. It makes more sense for agriculture to be done in doors for example, so a darkened sky shouldn't be a problem if you can keep the lights on where you grow your food. You can clean up the pollution, increase or decrease solar radiation hitting the planet as needed, and a variety of other geo-engineering efforts to counter the effects rapidly with a sufficiently energetic economy.

Don't we almost need someone to stand up and challenge us as a country to do something on the order of the space program? Perhaps the orbital ring and associated solar power array which would then send that power back down planet-side for use.

The big picture is, very roughly, that consciousness was lost in catastrophic events in the past. Evidence of civilization remained, consciousness was regained, people realized that it existed before and was lost. Mystery schools form to try to protect against that happening again but are eventually corrupted by ideas like the need for masters and slaves, therefore justifying an effort to keep most people unenlightened, unconscious, downtrodden. We're a splinter group opposed to that and seek the highest elevation of each individual.

Is Graham Hancock on the right path with his assumptions about a worldwide, high tech civilization existing before the last ice age? Could you tell us about this ancient civ in any detail? Do we have any bases/operations on the moon or mars yet? Do crystals serve a function with reaching a higher state of consciousness?

No bases on the moon or mars. We don't consider the prior civilization to be particularly high tech by modern standards. Comparable to what existed 2000 years ago, but more integrated globally.

Fair point. My assumption was when HLI threw out the $500K number, the spending power would be roughly the same to today, maybe a bit less. And if it's roughly the same, more people would be better off, given that the money would probably be heavily taxed for everyone's benefit, assuming the taxed money collected would be put to the appropriate use.

It was meant as a 10x improvement in real terms per capita, i.e., an elimination of poverty and the sort of conditions that allow extensive free time to develop as a person.

Hi there, again. Thank you for answering my question in a previous thread the other day. I have another for you.

I remember having my first lucid dream when I was 5. I would also have dreams that would show me future events. In my 20's I decided to attempt to "master" the sleeping side of my life and studied mostly Carlos Castaneda and Gurdjieff to do so. That's when things got scary. I ended up successfully training myself to have out of body experiences prompted by the process of falling asleep. I was also able to successfully affect others with these OOB events. It got too scary though, and I ended up being attacked (for lack of a better word?) by my own mind while awake, hearing voices when I was trying to fall asleep, things falling off walls, see words appear in the grass, and being bothered what I think were units of consciousness that have no physical form. It seemed that the exercises I was doing (attention exercises, a lot of eye movement stuff and silencing of the internal dialogue) actually induced schizophrenic symptoms. When I converted to Christianity it all stopped after about 6 months of fighting. Can you give me some insight on what happened to me?

You played the game for the thrill and lost yourself in the process.

Regarding the CF, how is the message spread without liberal subversion and outshadow the email scandal? Most liberals are completely unaware of SAPs or even care. It also seems most of the "attacks" get easily reconciled as petty propaganda by liberals and literally nothing sticks to the bitch in the end.

If something concrete exists between her and the extorted SAPs where can anons like us dig into to uncover it?

You need the big picture, not just Hillary. Bush and Clintons did a lot of stuff together, including CIA cocaine running, 9/11, etc., and you should take the approach of the system being broken rather than just a narrow partisan view.

You're getting a better conceptual grasp of what happened in the past here, but this is a trick that has already played out.

To a large extent, you have a free society that resulted from those efforts. The next step is actually utilizing those freedoms, not running a similar con on the establishment.

My question in this thread (>>81410486) was a little more specific. I would assume the answer is because powerful people want people like you dead. Surely there are ample indirect ways of getting the information out though. What stops your organization from pushing as much info out to as many people as possible? I refuse to believe that /pol/ is the best outlet reachable without getting "snuffed out."

I hope you answer this specifically, it makes very little sense to a simple man untrained in the ways of the ancients.

We work with similar purpose in a wide variety of ways. There isn't anything special about /pol/ other than it is a significant, high traffic environment of people that want to think some things that matter.

We think it is important to depart from the idea of passenger rail and build platform rail. For example, you could drive your car onto a platform and be taken ~500 miles in minutes, completing the first few miles and last few miles in the ordinary way. In other words, enhancing the efficiency of the basic existing system without incurring the costs of the "last mile" problems.

How can we take any meaningful action when western democracies have been so thoroughly balkanized? Over the last 50 years, every platform for unity has been destroyed or "discredited." People no longer experience common ties through family, community, religion, country, etc. It's just a bunch of hedonistic itch-scratchers going it alone.

So, the collapse of 2008 happens, and nobody calls for blood. Edward Snowden informs us of a secret surveillance state, and nobody calls for blood. European politicians flood their countries with dangerous saves, and nobody calls for blood, etc etc etc...

What do we do about the fact that our cultures have been destroyed and there is no meaningful platform left for mass unity and resistance?

The reason you are easy to co-opt during events like 2008 is because just saying no to the current system isn't meaningful opposition.
You need some concrete ideas about what to change and where to go from here. If you don't know yourself and your mission, you can't stand against the winds of balkanization.

Putin is actually more of an anti-fascist than fascist. The US merges state and corporations and bought up the Russian economy in the 90s. Putin seems like a fascist seizing all of that back, but is really undoing fascism. It's necessary to do this from a position of strength, and there is corruption in Russia to be sure - nowhere close to ideal.

We don't think in terms of good and evil as much as simply clearer principles. Most people want similar things and they differ in how to get there or the clarity with which they define what they want.

A lot of what you might consider bad today was biologically necessary in the past. It's not good for the development of the mind to be burdened with childbirth at 14 or 15 years old, nor is it necessary now, but once upon a time people didn't reliably live a whole lot longer.

I'm glad you're back, I've missed you.

Much of continental Europe was headed in the direction of the American revolution in the 19th century. The wars there are largely efforts at disrupting this and controlling the spread of productive nationalism, especially in regards to independent financial stability.

Putin is highly constrained by circumstance. He compromises a lot out of necessity, and it is hard to say what he'd do given free reign.

Symbol manipulation is very important to consciousness. Especially the ability to interpret symbols in multiple ways. One of the consequences of a tendency towards coherence is an undermining of agency, so it's important to be able to simultaneously see multiple interpretations of the same symbol. It gives you room to create agency in spite of coherence.

So if I'm reading into this correctly. George Washington was involved with the Illuminati in some way?

And the American Revolution was concocted with Washington as it's chosen figurehead? That he know the spreading of the Masonic lodge was happening, sort of like with Obama and BLM?

In the end did Washington believe the concept of a unified government of the people or a government separate from its citizens?

Anon responded more or less accurately.

The illuminati was a disinformation campaign to make the revolution look like an establishment play, when in fact it was a real rebellion.

In what way was the American Revolution only "somewhat" successful? Does it have to do with the banking system?

Did the US help Erdogan stage a coup to consolidate his dictatorial islamofascist powers to... What, keep Turkey in NATO? What does that have to do with what happened in Syria? I thought Syria was about preventing Gaddafi from wresting power from the elites, an "independent" currency and African nationalism. I thought that successfully ended. So why Turkey? To prevent it happening there?

A free society is highly vulnerable to subversion.
The revolution doesn't end at the end of the revolutionary war, it is just a significant part of a much larger process.

Trump?

He has spoken about a desire to fund major infrastructure improvement, but he thinks of this in terms of building grander versions of what already exists. Something along the lines of turning a dumpy airport into a "Trump tier" airport. This has very little economic utility and is basically Krugman-esque stimulus. A term he used for covert dissemination of truth through symbolism in popular media. Like (according to him) certain events in The X-Files.

Is this idea of "Controlled Leakage" accurate? Are there any subtly red pill media? Books? Movies? (Like Angry Birds, apparently.) TV? Videogames? (Like Assassins Creed, for example, with overarching themes of dueling secret societies wrestling over control of the world to attain and maintain Peace. One faction (Assassins) wants peace through responsible freedom, the other (Templars, interestingly enough) wants Peace through totalitarian control.)

There is no indication that the coup was even remotely close to being successful. Erdogan's hotel was bombed after he left, his plane was not brought down by "coup faction" jets in the air. A few soldiers were put onto the streets under the guise of anti-terrorism drills and quickly surrendered when they realized what was going on. The whole thing was a joke from the start.

Yes. No room for debate there. You can look up public companies that have contracts for weather modification programs for example.

We're headed into another major financial crisis and reordering of global markets as well as a shift in geopolitical strategy of the US. Confidence in the financial system is collapsing and the regime is struggling to hold it together without allowing a sustained period of growth.

Do the elites really believe Islam can be managed and controlled? Are Obama and Merkel delusional about Islam's nature or they just don't care because of their plans

Yes, they do.

Think about terrorism as it actually exists compared to the real potential.

Any moderately smart terrorist could do tremendously more damage than any of them ever have.

I've mentioned in previous threads how a few snipers can knock out much of the US grid almost instantaneously.

Knowing just this one single mode of attack, you have to either believe:

(1) there is no small cell of terrorists with a few thousand dollars of capital and moderate intelligence level or

(2) radical Islam is very much under control and the terrorist threat is mostly a

The idea that they have America by the balls simply isn't true. They've had to kill presidents to keep control and there is a lot of blowback from this. Belief in a conspiracy surrounding JFK's assassination is almost universal, and these sorts of ideas are very crippling to the illusion of the cattle being free range.

The civility of society can collapse almost overnight in very dramatic fashion. It's a rather tenuous grip.

We're largely support of the original designs of the US government, although some modifications are needed - mostly in terms of increased clarity. The idea of terrorism justifies foreign wars for control as well as domestic police state. Both are very important to the methodologies of control currently used. It's particularly useful in the sense that you can't defeat a tactic, so the war on terror cannot be won. In this way, it is highly demoralizing to the population.

Trump will govern similar to the way he has acted as a businessperson. There are some criticisms to be made (somewhat exploitative at times, as well as short term profit seeking over long term viability) but also merits to the approach - the world needs deal making between countries, not dick waving.

Hillary isn't interested in WW3 as long as she can appear to have the biggest cock in the room. There are two different ways you can interpret the "jewish" problem. Low grade intellects think of this in terms of an ethnic one. The more significant angle here is that the symbolic significance of the OT and NT in the Bible are mirror images, in opposition. Lucifer and Jesus both call themselves the morning star, but one is suppose to be the good guy and the other the bad guy. This is a more fruitful line of inquiry than obviously false claims of ethnic jewish hegemony over the world.

One of the big problems with sexual liberation movement is that very few people bond as individuals. For an unsophisticated actor, the easiest way to deal with the vaccine problem is skip the things that are not deadly. No reason to get a flu shot each year for most people. Depending on your lifestyle, where you venture in the world, how closely you interact with urban populations, you might skip an awful lot.

We don't think you have any responsibility to inoculate yourself to provide herd immunity to others with weaker immune systems, which is a lot of the ongoing basis for many vaccination programs.

I asked you a question last night and in your answer you asked me if I was familiar with the Sign of Jonah. I looked it up, and as I was falling asleep I think I understood what it was about. My question was about the May 2 2011 Osama raid, you told me to look and see what other events were close to then and the only one I saw was the royal wedding on April 29. Not sure what the connection is there or if I'm on the right track. Jonah running from God and thereby imprisoned in the belly of the beast, the pharisees demanding a sign from Jesus right after he performed miracles, they had no faith, so what is basically being said is that faith in God is not something that can be given conditionally, God will not save you and show you the secrets of the world and prove these things to you, all the evidence is already there, if you ask and overreach you missed the point entirely. Also, on blasphemy: I started thinking of how evil acts are like a demand for God to reveal himself and in a way are extreme versions of this. Picture some 'priest' raping, torturing, and killing kids in some crypt in the Church basement. They are so far from God and so desperate for a sign that won't come, they get hard off the sick thoughts of lust and destruction, and all the while they are looking for a sign, surely something so provocatively evil must warrant a response from God. But they get none, are forever disconnected, will never find out, and will be utterly destroyed. Also seems like the Killing of Isaac in the old testament is kind of similar in that Abraham actually goes through with it, but it seems like the inverse, in that Abraham's faith is in Satan in a way, and the fact that he is willing to kill his beloved son brings out Satan in a sign to Isaac. Seems like a different god than Jonah. Are these stories meant to be opposites?

The OP image is related to this question.

Trump "goaded" the release of Obama's birth certificate three days before the Osama raid.

You need robust economic growth that organically drives a "minimum" wage higher. And is there any evidence of ghosts being real?

What is the symbolic meaning of the bread of life discourse where Jesus says unless you eat the flesh of the son of man and drink his blood you have no life with you which he repeats multiple times until many of his followers leave him? This symbolism is continued at the last supper where he tells his followers to eat his body and drink his blood in the form of bread and wine in memory of him. What does it mean?

No

He never took a blood oath to join a mystery school. The idea is that if you carry on his teachings, they become public knowledge and no one should need to take such an oath or compromise themselves in that way in the future in order to gain access to hidden knowledge.

Is inner-city ghetto culture as dangerous as it seems? Do you really think it's possible to overcome that with the robust economic growth you mention?

Blacks went from pretty much 0% literacy and no economic mobility to a robust and mobile demographic with higher rates of marriage stability, childbirth in wedlock, etc., all under the limiting circumstances of jim crow era in a very short time period - largely related to the injection of some mobility and education in WW2 / veteran aid programs. Sincere efforts to uplift the community would likely meet even more robust success.

Does it really make it sense to carry 20 times of your own weight with you just to bring you comfortable to the location you want.

The energy and therefore money saved by not doing this could probably provide for a lot of carsharing stations at the train stations.

But maybe I can't really imagine how big the USA is due to the tiny overpopulated size of Germany.

Yes. You recapture a lot of the energy from breaking that you're spending accelerating. Such a system is costly mainly in terms of startup (building the infrastructure in the first place). Actual transportation costs are relatively small. You don't have to deal with complicated questions like communal property (car sharing), how to handle insurance, liability, maintain excess capacity, and a host of other problems.

I like your optimism!

Changing topics,

Yesterday, when asked about the media, you said that there is nothing preventing us from doing a hostile takeover of the media.

If you meant "hostile takeover" in the corporate sense, I don't see us being able to come up with the hundreds of millions of dollars in capital this would require. And if you meant "hostile" as in armed occupation, I don't see the establishment letting us get away with that, either.

Can you expand more on what you meant?

I meant hostile in the corporate sense.

Take a look at the Bernie Sanders campaign. Mostly small donations from a large group of people. Could've bought several major newspapers instead of an ad campaign for example.

It's a reasonable approach.

You said to follow the money from the bond clearances in the days following 911, I'm guessing these bonds were cashed in rather than in the chaos all records of the bonds were destroyed and $240 Billion was siphoned from the public purse to the issuers of the bonds. Did the original purchasers of the bonds get their payout or did they get scammed?

The bond issuance was a combination of scamming the market for capital and money laundering. Obscures the origins of the hostile takeovers of former USSR assets after the collapse.

There is something strange and real referred to symbolically in major religions, i.e., the kingdom of heaven is within you. The democrats have some interest in letting Trump be the one to do this. This is how all of your elections work. Which faction do the tech billionaires generally belong to? Should they be closely monitored?

The main reason an attack on Saudi Arabia is being considered is because the world economy is headed for another deep recession. There is already a glut of oil and it would only get worse. This is very destabilizing to the petrodollar order. There are other benefits like putting pressure on China, but preserving the western financial system is the primary goal.

As far as direct personal enrichment goes, the Clintons got their fortune long ago from their involvement in the CIA cocaine running and taking down the USSR with Bush. Think of the CF as a vehicle for them to employ their cronies and pay bribes to other people. You are on the right track looking into voting machine companies making big donations to CF, rigged elections, etc.

The best well-documented case study you will find is Chinagate. Clintons give China nuclear weapons and missile technology in exchange for major contributions to the '96 election campaign. It's influence peddling and corruption, often at the expensive of national security.

Are all attempts at engaging within the electoral system a fool's errand? Or is it still worthwhile to try and make the choice between Clinton and Trump because Trump will still make different choices and have different alliances than Clinton? Is it merely a matter of whose face we want telling us what the mostly predetermined history unfolding is?

You should be more interested in attacking the establishment than defending part of it. Going after the CF is good work. Defending Trump when you know he is an approved candidate of the establishment is defending the very same status quo you want to change.

Forgive me for not thoroughly reading all of your previous threads; I have begun reading Origin of Consciousness and the Breakdown of the Bi-cranial Mind as you recommended earlier.

You have used and referenced Christianity in previous threads and how it adequately portrays the understanding of consciousness. I find that many modern day Christians are indeed unable to see past the metaphors, such as interpreting Christ as being physically reborn as opposed to spiritually awakened, and the second coming of Christ being an actual physical phenomena, as opposed to a world-wide spiritual awakening of the spirit of awareness and consciousness that his second birth represents.

Would you mind elaborating on this awaking through other religions, such as Buddhism? As these matters make more sense to me in a Buddhist context, I would greatly appreciate it.

If nothing else, thank you for your time and threads; they are quite fun to read.

Combine the idea of coherence in consciousness with a very popular figure. Their identity is literally passed down through the generations. As someone with agency, it's possible to adopt an identity that exists in the collective memory. You can carry this sort of thing into thinking of a second coming of the Christian messenger as being a quite literal thing without invoking ideas like God inseminating a random woman.

The problem you have changing the system is that is very hard to come by someone offering alternatives. Something up your alley would be writing papers on mega infrastructure projects, detailed cost/benefit analysis.

What do they gain from planning that if the goal is to protect the western financial system? Trust in elites is at all times low across the West and populism is on the rise. Pretext to crack down on what's left of civil liberties and legitimate authoritarian regimes all around while the rebelling factions will be too busy fighting each other to unite against them? What do they gain from stirring the popular anger to unprecedented levels?

The western financial system can grow in strength even during a recession as long as the west is less worse off than others.

There are particular strategies for making this true. US is one of the only countries that can theoretically be resource independent. If you clamp down on global petro supplies, drive the price up, you get the US energy sector back booming - one of the only growth areas in the last decade, arguably the only one as far as actual production goes (i.e. excluding biotech or third wave of internet startup wannabes).

Why are they increasing production anyway? Is climate change BS just a policy to manipulate oil producers?

Saudis want to keep the ability to act as a market maker, so they need to pump excess supply to discourage the development of other supplies.

Climate change is "real" in the sense that CO2 is actually a greenhouse gas and has a very moderate forcing effect. Is it potentially catastrophic? Not even remotely close. No. There are plenty of cogs in the machine that don't see it for what it is.

India has a lot of potential to be a game changer on the world stage. They are interested in enlightened development out of necessity. How long before Syria becomes divided into a Kurdish territory and Israeli expansion? Does Merkel regret her choice when she sought to take in the refugees in order for the eastern expansion and future energy market footholds for Germany? After all, this is why we are taking them, they already have deals to utilize the new Kurdish state for its resources after their commitment to dissolve the Syrian population by accepting refugees. Does she regret her method?

US is actively betraying the Kurdish independence movement, most notably by offering Turkey intelligence as part of the bargain for supporting ISIS.

Merkel has a self-loathing complex as is all too common in the west. To the extent she regrets anything, it is only the increased potency of her opposition as a result of the problems.

China's government has(or will have soon) a social rating system which assigns a score to individuals based on how subversive(or not) they are to the state.

Is there such a system in America? If not, are there plans to implement one? What's the timetable?

Yes, this exists in the west and is far more sophisticated. The main difference is that China will implement a wide range of incentives / disincentives for behavior very overtly, whereas the US usually takes an all or nothing approach to stifling an individual rather than gradation.

As far as technology goes, the gap between what is in the public domain and what is utilized is far more significant than between what is public and private. For example, you can build a space elevator today and completely revolutionize the world with only knowledge in the public domain. The biggest gap between private sector technology and things in the public domain is in the field of biotech. There are a number of cures for various things that are not public for a variety of reasons.

I remember you talking about next-gen nuclear and hydro having huge potential. What are some other factors? Highly automated agriculture seems like a big one. It seems like moral progress is necessary too. Do they come hand-in-hand or does one lead to the other? I suppose someone has to do it first to show the way forward.

Increasing the energy throughput of the economy is approximately the same thing as decreasing the required human labor input for the same outcome. This is prerequisite to freeing and elevating the human mind.

Both I suppose. Your previous threads make me uncertain about attempting to use it to improve the world, though I would like to. From what you've said if I focus on the philosophical aspects I'm less likely to be deemed a threat.

I suppose my greatest passion is in merging it or using it to further my understanding and ability along the lines of the Maimonides studies I referenced earlier.

I posted an OP pic in another thread showing oscillation in the inflation rate of the universe. Only published in the last few years and an interesting bit of evidence towards thinking of the universe as a semi-stable quantum fluctuation.

There's a lot of tangible philosophical inquiry to be done here about why it is that we're able to exist.

Practically, the most useful work in physics is dynamic materials. We'd like better dynamic tuning ability of thin films to build a shield against solar storms for example. Need better superconductors for a variety of applications.

If you want to push theoretical physics further, maybe look into the LISA project and the underlying tech - work to improve that. Who knows what a better comprehension of gravity will get us.

It seems like the efficiency of producing energy is always greater the larger the scale. This also seems to require more extensive grids and centralization. Creating something small-scale as proof is usually needed needed before traction begins on these kind of things? Also I like the idea of decentralized power for also reducing dependency on the system. There are obvious barriers to small-scale nuclear because of availability of isotopes, but perhaps thorium reactors could be made household-sized? Even just solar ($1/watt off ebay nowadays), few thousand watts capacity plus a few thousand in lead-acid batteries plus a $300 inverter, any property with running water with a couple feet of head could generate significant power as well. None of this matters to the public until we can show them something tangible and that it makes our lives better? What kind of scale would you target first?

Energy production is best done at scale, yes. You should ditch the decentralization / off the grid thing.

We're very sensitive to the philosophical concerns involved in highly centralized energy production, especially giving over of too much power to the state. It's a good philosophical line of inquiry for people to work on - if the state can provide 100x or 1000x or more of our current energy usage, what's the best way to allow it to engage in such an activity while balancing against the potential for too much power in the government? How do you distribute the value of the produced energy? Or decide how much to reinvest versus pay out?

You're really overplaying the significance of ancient deity worship. That's not what these people are doing.

The power structures that exist in society today are a result of a global loss of consciousness after civilization collapsed 10,000+ years ago.

The first to emerge as conscious formed secret societies. At first, this was meant as a means to preserve their awareness. It later became corrupted by the idea that the knowledge should be hidden in order to rule over the masses, and much of what you see today derives from that.

So I heard that a drug that cure Cancer and AIDS has already been discovered but they're keeping it on the down low because of overpopulation. Is this true?

Not overpopulation.

The most promising avenues for life extension are turning back the clock on stem cell lines. We already have a pretty robust ability to do this, but it carries the burden of massively increased cancer risk.

The issue here is that we're in an intermediate stage of being able to prolong life, but not really restore vitality. Cancer cure has to be kept on the shelf otherwise you get a population skew even more heavily towards geriatrics than we have today.

Also two somewhat important for me questions:

1. Do you think we are parts of a "God"?

2. In one of the past threads you mentioned Bioviva company. Could you provide some insider directions on pharmaceutical anti-aging methodics and cancers' cures. What companies and organizations should I look out for?

My own preference is to read the academic literature, being careful to dismiss the narrative and focus on hard facts. Draw your own conclusions.

Previous threads people mentioned a book by Hancock if you'd rather go the easy way.

Other people brought up Bioviva. Here again you are seeking to skip the hard work of educating yourself. Almost everything is in the public domain, with few exceptions. It's just strange because when you think about it, even "atheists" don't see it. Symbolism is like another language in my opinion. What is it in the average person's mind that allows them to be so easily swayed by assumption? Just the rampant conditioning? The "brainwashing" and dulling of the senses?

Coherence effect. It's physically and mentally taxing to see things differently than most other people do.

This is actually the origin of why "elites" seem to be so obsessed with symbolism. If you have your own hidden interpretation of the symbols, you can ease the burdens of coherence by sharing them with the masses so that the representation of the abstract is the same, but only the interpreted significance differs.

The most important thing you will get from math is the study of logic and methods of proof. I've found that combinatorics is the most interesting place to start for most people. I have also heard the people we know are pulling string that the public can see are "the tip of the iceberg". just wondering what is what, are they the top or are their more layers we have and will never see?

There is no rigid singular hierarchy. The world is multipolar with competing groups and interests.

Satanism isn't a well-defined term. Lay people usually consider it to approximately mean an embracing of evil, others think of it in terms of the symbolic meaning of Lucifer in the Bible, but even this is interpreted differently - both Lucifer as good, and Lucifer as sinister.

What is the significance of the Georgia Guidestone cube?

Georgia Guidestones should be regarded as exemplary of the folly of your regime. The idea that Earth can't support more than a few hundred million people is increasingly absurd with each passing day and advance in technology, yet "elites" have believed this sort of thing for a long time.

There is a more instructive lesson here though. If you are clever you can use ideas like this to glean how high up the food chain someone is. For example, if it is clear that Malthusian type thinking is being deployed as a conscious effort to justify control, you are dealing with a more sophisticated actor than someone who genuinely believes in overpopulation.

I take a much more expansive view of the second amendment than many. You have a right to tanks, battleships, nuclear weapons, whatever.

That being said, guns are by no means a crucial thing. You can collapse the US government without using guns. Even if they confiscated all of them (and I'd suggest you violently resist if they tried), they would remain highly vulnerable.

Can you elaborate?

Hitler was put into power by the British. If you go review his speeches, the rhetoric actually started out as anti-masonic more so than anti-jewish, then was subtly shifted over time.

That by itself tells you that what you're seeing is someone who was put into place to co-opt organic movements.

The sorts of things that Hitler was put into place to achieve were: (1) discrediting nationalism, (2) discrediting armed opposition to organized conspiracies, (3) destroying nation states, (4) centralizing financial control

What stunt could possibly be pulled to convince the populace that a woman who can't fill up a middle school gym with supporters beat not one, but two politicians who were received like rock stars by the public in the same election cycle? You guys know that the "she beat Bernie" stunt went over like a fart in a crowded elevator, right? You're aware that Americans aren't even bothered to watch your

""news"" networks anymore, right? If you guys think you're going to snow us into thinking she beat Trump legit, you'd be better off retreating to your armored bunker right now.

People are still highly vulnerable to accepting larger mainstream media narratives, if not the details.

For example, even though belief that the democratic primary was rigged is widespread, it is far less common to think Bernie won outright. Uncertainty over what the results would be absent interference is very prevalent (although unwarranted, Clinton didn't even come close).

In order to defeat the regime, you need what is called common knowledge of the fraud.

What that means is that isn't enough for everyone to think the game is rigged, they need to also think that everyone else thinks the game is rigged.

If you are unsure that everyone else is on the same page, the average person is immobilized by fear of being an outsider.

If Hillary were to win, how detrimental would this be to your plans to introduce a candidate in 2024, considering the massive influx of immigrants and refugees she promises?

Also, which one would be more beneficial to both us and your goals, Hillary or Trump?

It's a wash.

On the one hand, our rhetoric might superficially resemble Trump's and, if elected, he is going to do significant damage to the public's readiness to accept that because a major financial crisis will follow that is to be blamed on him. That's not a major problem because we have no problem branding to fit the political climate and then going about with our agenda regardless of the relationship it bears to the campaign.

On the other hand, we're almost polar opposites of the type of people Hillary represents. Continued migration, identity politics, fracturing of the discourse, etc., are not helpful, but we don't judge another eight years of it to be fatal to our effort.

I've actually pondered this.

You remember the hubub about FTL neutrinos a few years ago? They said it was simply an error.

But what if that was simply a cover story? If FTL neutrinos were real that implies they could, at the very least, send messages back through time.

Sending messages back through time has actually been a theme I've seen a few times in conversations similar to these, and one I believe is possible based on my understanding of physics.

It's immediately obvious that you haven't studied much physics here. For example, the existence of FTL particles doesn't in any way imply that people are capable of FTL travel.

This kind of baseless speculation really needs to be purged from alternative thinking. Learn math, read physics textbooks, read the literature, conduct your own experiments. Get grounded in reality. You are not going to get anywhere trying to read tea leaves from science journalism.

The Clintons work for what can be loosely described as British intelligence, as do the Bushes. The Rothschild house and the monarchy have merged both in terms of intermarriage and deep cooperation.

The US government has been their biggest enemy ever since the revolution. They'd like to continue to gradually strengthen China and fade US power.

The longer view here would be that after the US is weak relative to China, the Chinese government can be easily toppled (it isn't domestically popular) and replaced by the British oligarchy.

Are modern NatSoc movements, including the Skinheads and their likes a form of controlled opposition?

Are they a plant?

What are the predictions for the Globalist vs Nationalist divide? What's the current state of affairs?

Yes. It's fine to say something like the border should be closed because the US is already in dire straits. Closing it because you think latinos are an inferior race is silly. Whenever you allow invalid motives to be associated with valid policy, you are hindering any chance of good policy.

Quite true.

What of the second question?

Globalism will ultimately prevail. In the long run, it doesn't make sense for mankind to be divided up and opposed to each other.

In the medium term, we think strong nationalist movements coupled with robust economic development is a better path forward.

Globalism, as it comes, should be derived from the success of the US as a city on the hill, rather than the collapse of the US leading to stateless oligarchs that run the world.

Can you tell us how the Chatham house relates to the CFR? And what relation does the Chatham house have to the alliance between the Rothschilds and British Monarchy?

There is a lot of cross membership between CFR and Chatham. It's similar for many of these organizations.

What they are doing with these groups is pretty closely analogous to paid shills on the internet today.

In the past, you had the same individuals pushing similar propaganda from 10 or 15 "different" organizations as a means of amplifying their voice and the public's perception of consensus. Most people here are pretty familiar with sock puppet management software and the like I imagine. Same thing, different medium.

Will Donald Trump win??

Hillary is the preferred choice of the establishment, but they won't give it to her if it is obvious to everyone that she doesn't have any support. There is less than 10% of the population that likes Hillary, plus another 15% or so that prefers her over Trump.

To achieve victory (make a potential Hillary win obviously fraudulent) he needs to soften up the anti-Trump crowd and hammer hard on the lack of actual Hillary supporters out there.

I've heard basically that as soon as martial law is declared or the economy crashes (or anything that breaks domestic harmony) the military is going to go Coup and detain the president and most of congress for treason.

As well as taking down the corrupt corporate elements like the rothschild and so forth.

There are elements in existence that are prepared and able to fight, but it won't go down the way you perceive.

Instead, the breaking of the current regime will look fairly ordinary to the masses. You'll get a protected candidate that can speak the truth, which will be impossible to stop because most people are sick and tired of the lies.

This is true, I mean when humanity reaches the stars we always see it being a united earth in the storyline and the new division ends up being space colonies.

Like a lot of things it seems doing a certain thing can be helpful or damaging all depending on how it's done and who it favors.

Like electronic money - if done corruptly it can be used to destroy dissent. But if done correctly it can be transparent, establish a paper trail, make money almost impossible to hide, etc.

That's correct. There is no reason for the widespread gold fetishization in principle, for example, but that isn't to say it is completely without merit. Viewed as a mechanism for constraining the power of corrupted interests controlling currency, it makes sense. Viewed as a "true" store of value, it is just superstitious thinking.

Many Zionists over the past 100+ years have fought hard to reclaim Israel and it would seem that those Zionists are now the dominant power in the world.

Can you give us an insider's perspective on what is the real goal is with Israel?

Additional insights as to how the Catholic or especially Jesuit factions relate to the Zionists would also be appreciated.

Fulfilling religious prophecy opens the door to both an exit plan and radical and rapid transformation of society.

For example, you have a situation in society where many people could be persuaded that a messiah type figure has come. You might exploit this opportunity as a mechanism for peacefully removing the old guard by "forgiving" them - neutralize their fear of fading, thus remove/dampen their strong incentive to resist being removed from power.

Of course it also opens the door to more sinister exploitation as well.

Things like bitcoin, gold, libertarianism, etc., all further the idea of weakening the state. Anti-authoritarianism is good, but anti-statism serves sinister globalism. Ross Perot was an actual America first nationalist, and so is Trump. They both consider the Clintons less dangerous than the sinister exploitation of the religious right by the GOP though. are illuminati jewish or not ?

You guys are right that jews have disproportionate influence in the world, especially in spheres where it really matters like finance and the media. Where you are wrong is that you confuse cause and effect. The jews were put into these fields by non-jews as patsies originally. Christians were not allowed to engage in usury, but jews had no problem with it, so "Christian" monarchs/governments used the jews to steal from the population, then blamed it on the jews. Today, with the widespread weakening of the nationstate, international finance is emerging as a shadow state. That gives the jews increasingly more power, but the nationstate is being destroyed by the same people who put jews into finance in the first place. So, many are right that there is growing jewish power, but generally wrong about why and how we got here.

I don't think Trump's ego and pride would allow him to take a dive against Hillary, or anyone for that matter.

Trump isn't in financial trouble at the moment, but would be if we have another real estate crash.

His original intention was to shift into the media business after the election with a Trump News Network type thing. He'd make billions a year off of such an enterprise.

Why and how did we get back under British control after we broke away? Can you point me to any history books that cover stuff like the House of Marlborough etc?

British control was cemented in WW2 when the US allowed the British to create the OSS (later CIA).

Before then they only had substantial, but far from a controlling interest, via influence peddling. For example, many ivy league universities get their original endowments from families that worked for the British East India Company as opium smugglers.

They purchased the ability to shape university mission statements, pick faculty, and so on with all of this money.

I remember you said something about reflective satellites at the Lagrangian point(s?) as a mitigating technique for global warming. Is it really that simple? Wouldn't we have to be pretty careful to block just the right amount of radiation?

Also, what do you reckon the actual climate sensitivity is? Or do you think the general way of thinking about it is flawed? Even skeptics and luke-warmers seem to agree on the idea of climate sensitivity, they just disagree on the numbers. I've seen anywhere from way less than 1 Kelvin to 1.8 or so on the more skeptical side, and the IPCC's estimates have an almost stupidly huge range that includes something like 4 or 5 on the high end, if I'm remembering right.

Conceptually, it is that simple.

In practice you would want dual use out of the system. Ever heard of tunable opacity windows? It is possible to deploy a shield that varies the amount of light blocked. This is the sort of effect you would want to be able to turn way up during intense solar storms for example, never mind fine tuning global temperatures.

Climate sensitivity is on the low end of IPCC estimates. The consensus figure went down multiple times over the last couple decades of IPCC reports - the fear mongers definitely had and retain unwarranted influence.

Regardless of how the races got to their current position, you don't believe racial animus is real? Look at South Africa, Rhodesia, add Europe to the list with the muslims and their conquering attitude. Of course in many cases other races can present themselves as allies, but usually only the small numbers which felt more oppressed in their former group and more welcome in the new group.

Do you support whites finally having their own homeland, free from having to co-exist with their former slaves, and other "indigenous" populations (don't even get me started on how the aztecs/mexicans are not from here) who feel it is their right to reconquer and subsume our homes with mass immigration? And their allies the Jews?

Is anything being done about this at all, because it seems certain to lead to war.

Until racial violence is a thing of the past, whites deserve their own homeland. Do you support this? Are you for or against Trump?

We don't support ethnic nationstates, no. Israel, for example, is an abomination to decency.

If you want to buy up plots of land and congregate with certain people, go for it.

We generally view Trump as less of a degenerate than Clinton, but you should be tempered by several things. For example, Obama's birth certificate was a fraud but he shut up about it after an obvious fake was released.

Secondly, you don't have any tangible commitments from him. At first there was a wall and send all the illegal immigrants back, but even that is being walked back now.

On the upside, he is definitely a narcissist and would like to go down in history as a great president. You can work with that if you get concrete productive policy into his mind, which is more than we can say for Hillary.

Seems like we should have plenty of time to develop technology to mitigate the issue.

What do you think of nuclear power? Actually I feel like someone already asked you that in an earlier thread, so sorry if that's an old question. Fusion coming any time soon?

No immediate catastrophe. Ocean acidification is more of a problem than warming. We already have sufficient technology to move off of carbon energy for the power grid.

Climate change should be considered almost a nonissue.
Fusion will come but there are still significant technological hurdles and not much funding for solving them.

You should study historical linguistics, specifically the origins of novel concepts. Things that we take for granted today like romantic love between a man and a woman had no reflection in the language until about 2500 years ago. It is a rather remarkable thing given how natural and innate most people think such an idea is now.

You've mentioned before being a "good priest"

At which level do these distinctions become relevant?

Do you use talented nobodies or does everyone at your level have some sort of real-world influence?

Are you aware of the Clinton strategy of triangulation? They do more than try to find the middle ground on policy. Any position they take, they will leak opposition to it and have stories published to that effect.

For example, a Hillary supporter might believe she has always been an advocate of gay rights, but just couldn't say so before she did for political reasons. They intentionally craft this sort of dynamic so that their supporters can project their own values onto her, regardless of how close they are.

This has a lot to do with why symbolism is pervasive and important among the elites. Multiple interpretations allow for many-layered cons and few who actually know what is what.

Adam Weishaupt(Professor of Natural Philosophy at Edinburgh University) "Proofs of a Conspiracy" published in 1798

Abbe Augustin Barruel(French clergyman) "Memoirs Illustrating the History of Jacobinism" published in 1799

The Illuminati was presented as an establishment operation at the time. The idea is to trick them into thinking the American revolution was their own project along these lines: give a false sense of freedom to the masses to solidify your control. Because you are giving "false" freedom, you have to keep it secret - but therein lies your opportunity to exercise a psyop and deliver real freedom.

The system is primed for a panic already. The timing is a balancing act. On the one hand, you don't want to give him time to get control before you pull the trigger. At the same time, you need a few months and some action on his part before you start trying to sell it as his fault.

Will the elections be rigged? How can we stop that? Give us a clue.

What's up with Turkey, what's their big role in all this? I feel like Erdogan is not the one licking Putin's boots but rather Putin himself.

Do space elevators already exist?

We are three.

The elections are always rigged. Sometimes the public's choice and the elite's choice is the same, but even then the elections are rigged in that their choice would have won regardless.

To stop rigging, you need mass citizen activism. Conduct your own exit polls, participate in the election monitoring process at precincts, conduct polls before the election. Use rigorous methodology - a casual poll of your friends is useless.

As I said in previous threads when predicting the Turkey coup and responding to the aftermath, the Turkish military was opposed to Erdogan's support of ISIS (as the Pentagon was opposed to Obama's support of ISIS). It was necessary to stage a fake coup to purge opposition. You've already seen Turkish incursions into Syria a few weeks later.

Why do these people pursue whatever it is they're striving to achieve? Have years of nepotism and ideological hogwash made them oblivious to the common realities of the everyday world?

They are trying to maintain control.

When people first began to become conscious thousands of years ago, they were often seen as demons or some such. Modern examples would be witch trials.

For this reason, conscious people formed secret societies and banded together to control and protect themselves from the masses.

Overtime, these institutions were corrupted by greed, selfishness, etc., and many of the elites no longer act on principle but rather out of habit and trivial self-interest.

Enjoyment? Sounds a little blatant since everybody is looking for it and instant gratification rather than go the hard and abstain what may be enjoyable but harmful on the long run?

In my opinion philosophies like this doesn't lead to felicity and greatness but obedience and numbness.

I can tell you one thing. I am well aware of the coherence of consciousness and the agency you can deduce out of this BUT the people nowadays and especially in first world countries like mine. People are in some way immune to it due to their habits which give them enjoyment with the push of a button and instant gratification and the moment you will try to make them aware that they are player and pawn in a game they don't know it exists tell them to rethink, reconnect, maybe take a step back and watch how people being programmed to hate themselves to fraction society in always smaller gated communities, where they can live even less conscious and aware of the shit they think they can't influence so why care?

Everything needs to be fun and good tasting and always go through life with 20/80 rule. It disgusts me.

And really I am trying to save some from time to time but I regularly get to the point where I realise. They don't want to be! They are "happy". They only can save themselves. What can I do to break this spell of comfort and enjoyment?

If you are significantly outside someone else's Overton window, it isn't hard to break theirs.

I've detailed in previous threads how the government can deploy current available technology to cut taxes to 0% without withholding any current services. If you could articulate this yourself, then you can easily convince everyone they are being scammed and make them very angry about it.

When you say that, are you talking in a metaphorical sense about memetics and subconscious messaging, or a more literal one as in 'broadcasting' messages directly into one's thoughts?

We know it is possible to fool people into accepting untrue realities through symbolism and narrative, but how does one go about combating this? How do you drag the people up through the cave?

Both.

Truth resonates with people. Tell the truth and most will get it. If you have a hard time selling an idea, you are either wrong or don't understand it yourself very well.

I read and saved all of your threads about ~16 now and i cant recall the points you made about the economy and certain technology which could ease any tax. Can you maybe give a short overview about it again?

It's possible with current technology to switch completely over to solar power based in space. We can supply the entire world's energy needs at annual profit of $15 trillion or so with a few trillion dollar upfront investment.

That's enough to cut taxes to zero, but any sort of similar thing will work. Large scale profitable infrastructure investment.

Sure. You can tell that many of the Giza structures are much, much older than claimed due to water erosion combined with climatological knowledge of how long the region has been arid.

Pretty soon you realize that these structures predate any civilization with a handed down historical record, and realize society completely collapsed at some point. It isn't hard to deduce with even the scantest of knowledge.

Actually what was quite remarkable - beside Nemelka is a really interesting person. That the party operated the same way you explained agency, enlightenment and global consciousness.

Like Buddha, Jesus, Mohammed they hijacked the movement of Anonymous to create a certain coherence effect and have free publicity.

They embodied something known to the global consciousness to profit from it but it backfired though my conclusion was that the people behind this are aware of certain techniques you are also trying to make us aware of for a better understanding of politics and how the world goes or the movement has direct ties to your organisation?

Most scientific advancement doesn't come from the elites. There are very few highly intelligent people that are on their side.

On a somewhat-related topic, in past threads you (I think it was you -- apologies if not) mentioned something about the elites trying to preserve the legitimacy of the government. I feel that both state and federal governments have lost legitimacy and I'm sure I'm not alone.

But what can be done about it? The elites greatly want to preserve their rule and have the full resources of the state to maintain it. Thanks to our ever watchful Three Letter Agencies, it's impossible to organize any kind of real uprising without being infiltrated and neutralized beforehand. The scale required for a successful revolution is not something that can be organized offline and it, too, would be susceptible to infiltration by our TLA friends, although it would take more effort.>The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants.

We're all raised with these kinds of messages and it's clear to anyone who bothers to think about it that we are far from Free, but no one is willing to act on it.

We're going to insert a candidate into US politics for the 2024 election cycle at the latest that is in no danger of being JFK'd, but might act sooner. Change is coming.
My advice to you, if you do not have the backbone to acquire sufficient leverage to challenge the regime directly, is to do this: confine your political advocacy to tangible, concrete ideas about how to make the world a better place.
For example, Kennedy pushed for a project called NAWAPA. Major industrial infrastructure improvements like this mean improving the conditions of the middle class and that directly undermines the regime. You also get people wondering why we are not doing positive things like that. Let the indictment of the regime be implied by the vastly different outcomes of stay the course ("everything is fine") versus what is possible.

Hey dude, late joiner to the post with a few questions.

1. can western style civilisation with abstract notion of universal rights exist in a nation if white people become a minority in that nation.
2. Do you believe white people will become a minority in europe and north america?

#1 - sure. India has a relatively western style democratic civilization.

#2 - I think white people already are a minority in NA (if you include Central America anyway). You are doing yourself a disservice by focusing on race though. The important thing is what people believe and do, not the color of their skin.

How does a skeptic learn about the occult and symbolism? How do I filter the bullshit?

Does the elite have power struggles and division within?

How much of the truth is hidden in plain sight?

Finally, is there any hope for us ordinary folk? How can we fight back?

Thank you for the ama.

The religious and symbolic stuff is mostly just a means of insider communication.

There are power struggles among the elite, yes. Trump and Clinton have very different ideas about what to do for example, but both of them see themselves as part of the establishment.

The most important things to fighting back are:

- having a better alternative (not liking the status quo is meaningless unless you can do better)

- having the means to defend yourself (freedom to act derives from the barrel of the gun, not the law)

Does this make our universe and our existence to the Schrodinger's Cat. We exist and not exist at the same time? Or rather half existing, half nonexisting?

Or does it relate to the CPT Theorem and there is some kind of Anti-Universe which both added equals 0?

And what do you think of the recent discovery of unsymmetric pear-shaped nucleus of Barium 144? Does this disprove the CPT Theorem and quantum physics as we now it due to the lack of missing supersymmetry, hence missing foundation for quantum theory?

No, there is no need for an "anti-universe" here. There is negative energy (driving inflation) that almost exactly balances the positive energy.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9YZVAMh8b0s>

Saged, hidden and reported.

Typical solar today is about 300 watts/kg.

By going to space, you get about 4 times the power as you would on Earth (better exposure times, and more actual exposure from a lack of atmosphere).

So you'd calculate your benefit something like this:

$0.3 \text{ kw} * 4 * 20 \text{ years} * $0.12 / \text{kwh} = $25,000$

You have to go on to deduct your launch costs ($1000/kg), cost of transmission equipment and the panels themselves (roughly double your weight for wireless transmission) and get to something like $20,000 in profit for every kilogram of solar panel you put into space as a first approximation.

Elon Musk is purposefully deceiving people.

Stuff in space lasts 10 years, 15 at best. The further you get from Earth you get, the less time it lasts. You'd have to relaunch the entire world's capacity of solar every 10 years.

How would you do that without paying the people at the rocket company?>You have to go on to deduct your launch costs ($1000/kg)

Even the most optimistic SpaceX costs are not that low yet. And those costs are cost/kg to LEO, not GEO (which is practically mandatory)

Not an argument.

Do you get a kick out of getting random nobodies on the internet to respond to your roleplay threads? Is it because you lack proper social interaction in your normal life?

The heavy falcon is projected at $1000/kg in mass production and its design is retarded for this purpose (landing with rockets instead of parachutes). Actual launch costs are closer to $400-500/kg (we're not using rockets designed for Elon's Mars fetish) if you wanted to do it all with rockets. Even then, we're not talking about the best design - a space elevator would only cost about $100B and drop launch costs to $10/kg.

Why isn't Hllary Clinton being prosecuted for her misconduct in handling, and likely selling, classified information?

The server was set up to sell national security secrets. What she did is treason and everyone knows this.

However, proving it is a bit more difficult. The reason why is because she used the server to leak some disinformation as part of intelligence ops as well. You can "justify" having genuine secrets (that she is selling) to make the server look legitimate as part of the op.

You can see why this case gets very hairy very quickly.

There can be no doubt that she is guilty as this is just another case in a long pattern of similar behavior (selling weapons tech to China for '96 campaign funding for example) but it is the kind of case that brings down the whole government if it goes forward.

The elections are always rigged. That doesn't always mean that the popular sentiment and the result are different. For example, Obama was favored by the masses in 2008 by a wider margin than was reported in the election results - it was rigged to protect the illusion of strong division.

When you have a very strong mandate behind a leader, they might try to exercise their own authority rather than play ball with the system.

Trump is in a very bad spot. He has run under the banner of nationalism which the regime hates. What would a war with Russia or China look like today? Is the USA as capable as we think?

Or am I wrong in even thinking the regime would fight a war?

There exists sufficient technology to prosecute a successful war against either Russia or China, but the US government does not have it.

The US regime has had virtually no cooperation from intellectuals for about 15 years now. It is technologically outdated and impotent.

We are incredibly pessimistic about the current state of affairs, but very confident in our ability to intervene successfully. The people of the world are awake to the fact that something is very wrong, but they don't know what direction to turn yet. We are here to give that to them.

Major methane leaks as a threat to our existence? Absolutely not. Life did just fine in periods significantly warmer and colder than the current environment. In the medium term, mankind needs to rise to the status of geoengineers but we're not going under for lack of exercising that ability anytime soon.

Good sir could you talk about the happening at the end of September? Will it be in the US?

Also what will happen to the financial markets and real estate if Hillary gets elected

If Hilary is selected there will be major corrections in the securities markets followed by more slow and steady climbing back like you have seen during the Obama admin. The idea is you have a shock event to lower standard of living substantially then only marginally improve it, but not back to the former condition, over time.

Hillary will keep carbon energy prices low to the advantage of Europe & China and against the interests of the US and Russia.

Plans/thoughts on mass immigration out of the Middle East/Africa to EU/US/Au? Does the racial make up of the populace actually matter to the powers that be?

The regime isn't anti-white. It is very much anti-middle class because strong middle class families produce educated potent offspring that can become challengers to the regime. It happens to be the case that most such people in the world are white, so white people may seem to be the target of their actions. That is missing the bigger picture though.

Mass immigration primarily serves to undermine the middle class; it is meant as an economic rather than genetic threat. There is also the added benefit of people generally having in-group preferences and the resulting increase in tension within a society that is easy to exploit for the regime.

The US regime has virtually no uncontrolled opposition. Many who give power to it do so unwittingly and relatively few see the bigger picture of what they are contributing to. The weakest link in the chain is the ease with which you can acquire and use leverage against the regime.

Any comment on the automation aspect?

The real driver of wealth is introduction of novel resources from expanding economies of scale.

As the largest banking institution in the world, the first and second national banks could finance dredging of rivers, canal construction, thousand+ mile roads, etc., that enabled the concentration of resources necessary for things like the automobile sector and eventual majority middle class. The best projects will always be those at very large scales (only accessible by the government, commons) and therefore much of the fruits of these belong to the masses. This is your inhibiting mechanism against increasing disparity.

What (if anything) is the better alternative to gold-backed currency?

Ideally you want your currency (debt issuance) to be backed by confidence in the investments that you make. A degenerate version of this is investments in the military. A more enlightened approach is something like investing in NAWAPA.

The idea behind backing currency with something like gold is to control a runaway printing (corrupted process), but ultimately a fruitless bandaid. These things happened when gold backing still existed.

The best defense against subversive manipulation of the currency is a healthy, educated, involved population - something you should strive for regardless of it being the best solution to currency problems.

Do Black people have any future in this country? I studied the historical policies of this country over the past 200 years and all I see is soft extermination. Whether through culture, media, the legal system or the economy it all leads to the same end point, soft genocide. 100 or even 50 years from now I don't see any distinctly Black communities existing in this country.

We do not support identity politics and we believe in equal opportunity (although not imposed equal outcomes) for everyone regardless of gender, skin color, whatever.

Any long term plans dealing with an energy based currency, or is FIAT our best bet as long as the corruption is dealt with?

We think that the production value of infrastructure minus what is reinvested should be distributed equally to the people, which is a form of a basic income based on energy. There is nothing wrong with a fiat currency in the sense that it is simply printed and not pinned to a (largely) fixed quantity (gold). The problem with the fiat regime you have now is that money is printed and used without good purpose.

In what predominant ways has Christianity been corrupted since Jesus? I'm talking blatant alterations. Does your perspective include gnostic gospels?

All of the dogmatic stuff as literal rather than symbolic. Then you have perverted unthinking interpretations of moral codes like opposition to homosexuality, when the Bible only speaks to sodomy. Anti-sodomy provisions go along with banning pork. Why? Pigs and anal sex both equal disease and unstable communities back then. So obvious, yet these things are overlooked by so many. Exactly. I feel a lot of rational Christians feel this way. Sin lies in intention, but instead of teaching this they just give you a list of ways that intention manifests. I really feel, when I'm sitting in mass with a good priest, that much the church does is right but the way the papacy and magisterium are run indicates the Vatican is more a power structure than the center of God's church.

That is correct. The church downplays intention; pretty much the opposite of what I have emphasized: agency.

What you really need to acquire is good processes. Most history books for example are filled with accurate facts but also silly narratives. You need the discernment to recognize the difference between hard fact and speculation, to absorb narratives not by internalizing them but by wondering why the author selected that narrative, what it says about that person or agenda.

When you begin to process information in a superior way like this, the volume of your reading is more important than the particular things you read.

What scares the establishment the most, right now?

I don't really fear anything. I'm concerned that the regime will not go quietly but they are so incompetent that humanity will destroy itself under their leadership anyway, so there is nothing to be lost by taking them on.

The smarter folks in the establishment realize their time is short. Their main fear is a French style revolution rather than American one replacing them.

Hello HLI,

I have come to the point where I need your advice and clarification again. So far I followed the breadcrumb navigation which had a very positive impact on my life. But derived from the book "The Origin of Consciousness..." and other related hypothesis I am in a state of discomfiture or I see more than one light and am not quite yet sure which is the deceiving one and which the enlightening. Assuming the "deity" impersonation of the hallucinatory projection of our right brain-hemisphere was the cause and root of the inhibition for the existence, progression and development of consciousness or its replacement. Is the "el" in our modern society another more mild form of the same mechanic and preventor of enlightenment and true divinity like the hallucinatory voice ("elt")?

Yanes describes consciousness as an operation operating like an analogy creating an analog "el" to an analog "espace" where it can move metaphorically. "el" think this somehow contradicts the modern "el" who is rather a similar commander to please physical needs and to grow its influence and circumference. Is the "el" something to get rid of like we needed to get rid of our "gods" 2000BC in order to reach true divinity within ourselves? But then again is this the way of deception, the tortuous path to oblivion certain mystical schools want me to wander to erase my growing light for the danger to them one could become - and the bible or the history is warning about? Was this the reason the advanced society 15000BC lost consciousness and the only cataclysm happened were their arrogance and pride to think their consciousness could handle divinity but instead they lost their enlightenment and consciousness what led to total annihilation? Or rather like Jesus suggested it is possible for our consciousness to be connected to the heaven within in and therefore compatibility with divinity? (cont)

Very good anon. You should be very suspicious of "your" own thoughts along the lines of "I think" but don't take this so far as to lose touch with your individuality and agency.

Even though my instinct is getting sharper every day there are now too many possibilities of constellation of deception. Even you could be the one - or are we again at the analogy of the two sides of a coin and you only show us the medal and our way could end on either of its sides? How to make sure I can fulfill my desire to bring major changes. How to identify the deceiver beside listening to my instinct. Are my concerns of any means? Besides the church who is the most important purposefully deceiver... and who deceive out of the lack of competence like some European leaders? Is the liber primus such a text to destroy the people who are able to decode it? Is it possible that something like this exists? Knowledge which lead automatically to annihilation and insanity? Are people who got insane via certain drug abuse an example of the incompatibility of enlightenment?, divinity? Out of the lack of readiness and intellect? Can that even happen to people like you to get lost on the process? How do you avoid it? How do I know when I am ready? Since this is only one part of the way how important is this compared with intellectual and scientific schooling, cultivation? I mean Jesus certainly hasn't access to any kind of modern science? How could he become this enlightened without any knowledge of basic science?

This is why Jesus coupled his enlightenment related teachings to morality. You need a rock upon which to build your church.

Do you know the Liber Primus ans why it hasnt decoded fully yet?

What do you think of technomysticism and the whole cicada 3301 thing is it a CIA psy op?

Can you answer this: What does the word "it" refer to in the following sentence: It is dark outside?

This one really got my mind working in a not very comfortable way.

And is the fact that i am living straight edge a hinderness to enlightenment. My instinct is telling me to distrust drug related efforts to reach enlightenment and people who do just want to go the easiest way. Though i had "mind" out of body experience and the clear feeling of interconnection between our minds.

You should stop worrying about cicada stuff.

You are on the right track to notice misplaced / unnecessary pronouns. The ambiguity there is an opportunity for multiple interpretations / divergent coherence.

Drugs can be an aid or a hindrance. I'd recommend most people experience some psychedelics at some point, but it is easier to mess up here than progress.

Hillary does not have the ability to commander the full force of the state because no one trusts her. Best case scenario for them is another 8 years of shaming opposition as sexist (rather than racist) and a slow grind.

The establishment has very little sense of direction. You are trained to think of them establishing a "new world order" but in fact they are just trying to hold onto an old world order. Their course is less certain in this context, and especially so these days.

Let's say, hypothetically of course, that an individual actor wished to affect change by purging some of the people who are making the country worse. The desired goals would be one or more of the following:

1. Incline those who are still alive behave better.
2. Encourage other like-minded actors to do some more purging without requiring any coordination.
3. Kick off a full-blown revolution.

Is that a reasonable way to achieve those goals?

Yes, there are many ways to do this. You need to acquire some form of personal protection (leverage against your enemies, weapons or otherwise) and there are many agents in the world today that do exactly this.

As to the revolution, you need to articulate an alternative prior. We'd oppose you fighting the establishment in a French revolution style (if you have no idea where you go once you win) even though we detest them.

When will the Petrodollar finally come to an end?

Are the elites freaking out over China, Russia and Iran's partnership together? China and Russia are the biggest threat to the US Dollar's world reserve status. Russia and China want to create a new competitive currency that oil can be traded. With Iran, which Russia and China have direct access to via the newly rebuilt "Silk Road" railroad system, Russia and China have direct access to the Middle East's oil reserves, which means Iran could be their Saudi Arabia.

How are the elites reacting to this geopolitical move on the Eurasian chessboard?

The petrodollar is really a misnomer. The dollar is backed up by military supremacy. It's value is tinkered with via many routes besides the petro trade: drug trade, printing, taxation, interest rates, etc.

The establishment wants to move the world towards a Chinese style model. They prefer a peaceful demise of US / Russia and gradual replacement by China as the center of the world (covertly ruled by the the banking houses and other establishment figures based in London).

There is no credible threat to US hegemony at the moment; no military threat exists and China's economy is not able to sustain itself from even minor hiccups like the US slapping a modest tariff on them.

The establishment wants the UK to return to being the open global financial center. In truth it never faded from this position completely, unlike in previous reserve currency collapses. That is because the British elites reconquered America and are using US government as a proxy to take the heat for their old empire activities.

They don't want to return to this position out in the open until global authoritarianism is on a more solid footing however.

Whose going to win the election? Will they replace Hillary with another candidate?

Hillary is being sent soft signals already that public perception of her electability is fading.

What I mean by that is that in order for the establishment to install Hillary, they only need people to believe it is plausible she might have won. Even if Trump is ahead 90-10 in popular opinion, if most of you still get the impression that maybe it is a tight race from the media, you are not going to hit the streets after Hillary wins despite a 9 to 1 majority.

Hillary is down by wide margins among likely voters. Her support among the general public is even more meager. Alternatives are being actively considered.

Could you toss out some ideas? I imagine it's possible to straight up murder a few people and make it look like a random action without raising much suspicion, but continually getting away with it sounds tricky.>there are many agents in the world today that do exactly this.

If this is true, then why don't we notice more bad people in positions of power dying off? Does this kind of thing happen mostly outside of the US?

You are looking for the wrong signs. In a past question session I mentioned that we gave a stand down order on the Syria intervention project to the US government. No need to kill someone; it is well known when the order is received that there will be consequences if not obeyed and therefore they stop.

If you step back and assess the world, you'll find that the establishment's geopolitical goals are really grinding to a halt. They have no firm control over Ukraine or Syria many years into these projects for example. The establishment is falling apart.

To a large degree, yes, our Dollar is backed by our military supremacy. The US Dollar's power comes from the fact that Oil is traded exclusively with US Dollars. It was the agreement made between Nixon and the Saudi royalty that ultimately led to the economic destabilization of the Soviet Union. This is what has given the US Dollar it's unlimited credit rating, which has driven our current boom and bust economy.

However, to claim that there is no credible threat to US hegemony is either showing how you really are just a clueless role playing faggot who doesn't know shit, or it could be your arrogance. There, indeed, is a threat to US hegemony. As I stated to begin with about Russia and China, they are the biggest threat to US hegemony. That's exactly why the US invested 5 billion in the coup in the Ukraine and why we are supporting ISIS in Syria.

Russia? No.

China is a long term threat but right now completely impotent.

Both of these countries have reasonable MAD status with respect to the US but either would lay down and take it if faced with US economic attack.

Why is the trafficking and abuse of children by the us and other governments condoned? Is that where all the missing kids go?

Establishment people want blackmail on each other because they wouldn't be able to trust each other otherwise. To this end, they encourage each other to engage in a wide range of degenerate things that the public would find unacceptable.

You've repeated this idea numerous times. Can you give examples of leverage?

Somehow I don't think you have Waco-style "leverage" in mind.

As a demonstration of the potency of the individual in the modern era, I have several times mentioned the vulnerability of the US government to an attack on the electric grid. A few snipers and modest knowledge of key points would allow you to bring down the grid and keep it down for weeks or months, thus collapsing the government for a few thousand dollars and a couple weeks of research.

We consider the ability to devise your own means as a representation of your merit in possessing such means, so I am not going to go too much further on this point.

The next financial crisis will resemble the last one. Asset prices are adjusted down sharply overnight and then a slow grind resumes like the last 8 years. You should have modest supplies available as several week interruption in the supply chain is easily possible as the world spirals out of control.

Live on the outskirts if you must be near major cities.

Try to involve yourself in the "real" economy in some way. Programming iphone apps - no. Making your own soap or beer? Good start. Network with these people and work on getting income off the books. All over the internet, no one but shills has anything supportive to say about HRC. You are opposed to the old world order, not the new world order. It is a few thousand years old. The new world order is what needs to be built - the American enterprise. Jefferson believed in a weak state that is easily subverted. Exactly the sort of thing the establishment tries to create in Iraq or Russia today. Washington instigated the constitutional convention to make the federal government capable of robust large scale infrastructure, productive nationalism. Jefferson fought it at every turn in favor of weakness. Americans struggled for manifest destiny, while Jefferson tried to stop the Louisiana Purchase and shilled for the coverup of Meriwether Lewis' assassination.

Hello there.

I would like to know if there is any actual truth behind the mysticism and magic surrounding the conspiracies regarding the "royal families" of the modern era.

Do these people actually believe they are worshiping an alternative god/deity?

Do you believe in this higher power?

Or is it all straight up cointel bullshit

Symbolism with a wide variety of interpretations is used by the elite to enable the telling of something like an "inside joke." It is specifically religious symbolism because of the high emotional impact.

Once you appreciate the phenomena of coherence in consciousness, you realize that keeping secrets is quite difficult. Emotionally charged symbolism that has many different keys to interpretation allows you to speak one thing with perhaps a dozen or hundred different meanings depending on whose ear it flows into and what keys they have to decoding your message.

I have so many questions for you and so little time.

Can you tell me the origin of the Ashkenazi Jews? The people that posted here claiming to be part of the Rothschild elite claimed that they learned / spoke a very weird language that did not resemble anything in contemporary times. It was clearly some weird sort of semitic language.

Who are they? Are they related to the ancient Carthaginians or are they related to the Ancient Roman Patrician families?

I only read the first few posts of the supposed Rothschild poster and didn't see that. It makes me think that the person might know more than I initially assumed. Secretive languages not known by many are commonly employed, including by me.

The Rothschilds don't have ancient traced heritage. They are a relatively new upstart that goes back no more than 500-600 years.

About all these conspiracies and groups and all this crazy shit going on:

Is this spookier/more down the rabbit hole than we think (i.e aliens, demons, illuminati assassins, etc) or at the end of the day is the power being held by regular, corrupt, rich yuppies who want to hold on to their power? Please answer, the question is bothering me. Also should a small time guy like me who posts on 4chan and talks about red pill material and the like be actually worried or am I to small fry to be killed/captured or anything?

No aliens. Demons only of the mind. Assassins are real and often used. Regular people are not really in danger just being aware, but you can get killed for inventing something that someone else wants or being smart enough to articulate alternatives to the regime, charismatic enough to gain a following, etc.

Establishment.

Often people are regarded as unconscious until they can perceive the interconnectedness of minds. It is possible to interpret your statement as desiring for each individual to awake into consciousness. You can also interpret it other ways like destroying the individual and degrading them into worker bees without agency. We favor the former, whereas the regime prefers the latter.

The current regime is a descendent of the Roman Empire. It had no interest in

A global tax is needed for a global currency. They are not making much traction with this. Global warming myth was their best shot at it, but no one believes it anymore. As such, they are proceeding to instead try to shift governments around the world to a more corporate totalitarian model along the China style before implementing it without any measure of popular support.

Better insight than even a very broad appreciation of the power of the mind would produce. Similar to how you dream of a person's death before it happens, but with more significance. In my last question session, I promised to review the alleged Rothschild & Warburg AMAs:

For those who find these things interesting, I suggest that you read about the Newton - Leibniz calculus controversy. Essentially, Newton was a fraud put forth by British intelligence to recapture the interest and admiration of the moderately intellectual class. Leibniz was a key architect of anti-oligarchical philosophy, American independence, etc. Newton on the other hand spread interest in nonsense like alchemy. This is a regular practice to this day, i.e., Hawking or Musk.

As I have said repeatedly, the world order that most of you are aligned against is not a "new world order" but rather a regime seeking to maintain the old world order. These are not intellectual people with great foresight and well laid plans, but rather almost always in a mode of reaction and containment of opposition. With this context, you can read the Rothschild AMA for example and see that it is a fraud; he suggests a much more encompassing reach than they have ever had, an older house than is true, and so on. These are people that are on their heels, not always many steps ahead. It is very much a similar situation to Hillary's attempted theft of the election being only possible in an environment of perceived competitiveness; no such thing existed by election day and so she had to concede.

Yes. Stock market highs are to be expected with a Trump victory. Sorry if this has already been asked. The big trigger for nonsjw lefty types now is climate. What is actually happening? I've been lied to about basically everything at this point, so it's hard not to dismiss as bs for profit, as every other scare has been bs for profit.

Natural earth cycle? Out of human control? Natural cosmic cycle? Intentional weather modification? All the data is a lie and shits exactly the same? I need a new lie to believe!

Some climate change is real. For example, the albedo of the northern ice sheets has changed significantly primarily as a result of Chinese soot pollution.

CO2 as a greenhouse gas driving global warming is not a major concern. The key question even if you accept the principle is what is the forcing coefficient, that is, how much warming (cooling) do you get per unit of CO2? The alarmists have cut their estimate of this coefficient in half over the last 10-15 years which puts the economically rational thing to do on the borderline of nothing; some stuff like better insulation on buildings makes sense because you actually save more than it costs over a reasonable time frame, but the costs associated with major constrictions of carbon consumption are not economically rational even with high estimates of environmental damage.

We actually believe that CO2 has a very modestly negative response coefficient (i.e. cooling) and have for a long time. As the satellite record becomes more extensive this will eventually become accepted as fact. Most of the alarmism is based on very faulty or even fraudulent correction of surface temperature stations.

We could write entire books about the various facets of this, but perhaps this is the best take home: even if global warming is real and CO2 would drive many many degrees of warming, it is cheaper to deploy a mirror to the Sun-Earth Lagrangian point that constrict our energy consumption by a couple orders of magnitude.

How can we best serve Trump? Should we be redpilling friends every day? Should we coordinate boycotts? What are we not even looking at?

Push very hard on the boundaries of the Overton window. He will operate within it no matter what, but the boundaries of this window have more to do with you than him. Politicians are followers, not leaders. Make him follow you by changing the narrative. Extremism is no vice when it comes to pushing for what is right - it changes the perception of what moderate and achievable is better than anything else.

At that 2.3% growth rate, we would be using energy at a rate corresponding to the total solar input striking Earth in a little over 400 years. We would consume something comparable to the entire sun in 1400 years from now.

How do we survive another 400 years?

400 years ago mankind had no industry to speak of. This is an incredibly long time to solve problems and also an impossible horizon to reliably prognosticate over.

However, we can reliably say that people will be effectively immortal in ~25-30 years.

This will dramatically alter what we consider to be part of the realm of the reasonable, i.e., building massive spaceships to travel to and colonize other star systems. We've got much longer than 1400 years to go just based on technology available today in principle before we run into resource constraints.

It was barely over 200 years ago that we established the American enterprise and set the world alight with freedom. Literacy went from near 0% to near 100% globally and the information age is only accelerating. We'd suggest that a mere 200-300 year cushion is comfortable, never mind 1400 or more.

One last question, if you have time. What we know of technology is always many years behind what is actually happening. Is there AI either in use here on the internet, or used for simulating/predicting world events. I am using AI loosely, no consciousness required, but computing power and learning to an extent that would surprise us given the information currently available to the public. In use by governments? Private organizations? Global organizations?

Thanks for the very thorough response to my last question

You won't see much that should be considered AI until quantum computers are more mature. The computational requirements of even the most basic protein folding problems or climate model are beyond present day supercomputers for all practical purposes, especially in the sense of pattern search rather than solving a narrowly constrained particular problem.

Thanks

Warburg thread was even less interesting than the Rothschild one. They both are very interested in pushing the idea that they are better educated, more insightful, intelligent, and controlling than what they actually are.

They have very modest powers to bribe, blackmail, and assassinate the immoral or stupid, but any network of two people (a public and private partner) is capable of holding threat of retaliation over their heads and neutering all of their power, or even a gifted individual with a dead man switch. They are largely impotent losers leading even more impotent losers.

The upshot is that at a 2.3% growth rate (conveniently chosen to represent a 10^Å—increase every century), we would reach boiling temperature in about 400 years. This statement is independent of technology. Even if we don't have a name for the energy source yet, as long as it obeys thermodynamics, we cook ourselves with perpetual energy increase.

Are you saying we will circumvent the law of thermodynamics within 400 years? Or are you saying you weren't aware of this issue that is floating around the upper echelons of academia? I know for a fact it is being taken quite seriously at RAND.

This is simply not a real problem. We have the technology to build a space elevator, put energy intensive activities in space, attach large radiators to the Earth, etc. These people are simply unimaginative cretins.

When you talk about the British Crown, do you mean literally the Royal Family and particularly the Queen, or is there more to it?

The nexus of world power evolved around the British Crown. There is a significant merger between the royal families, banking houses, and upper echelons of masonic leadership. These were generally distinct for the last few hundred years but significantly less so in the last 100.

Reality seems to truly be bending as time passes. This is a bit esoteric, and I understand if it is to absurd to comment on. It seems that many in power study the esoteric. I've come to believe more strongly that reality is literally shaped by thought and intention. Coincidences stack up in the Collective consciousness and in my personal consciousness.

To what extent are these phenomena accepted/understood as real? It's easy to dismiss as social construct and confirmation bias, but is that all it is?

It's concerning to me the vultures on the right seeming to gain Trump's ear. I seriously doubt the usual cast of characters will follow a Trump policy rather they would subvert it and he would never know it.

Who would you like to see as Sec of State?

We suggest that Trump allow Russia to finish off ISIS, cuts off western funding for them, and stages a soft coup in Saudi Arabia to turn them into a US rather than British client state and use the new possession as leverage against China. No military campaign necessary, trade negotiations with China become incredibly easy, and US / Russian economies are both revitalized as the other two of the top 3 big petro powers. Don't care who is the face of the policy.

Any truth to Mayor of London working to establish caliphate in London? This is what Anonymous5 has claimed in his threads.

The EU was never meant to be a model towards a new world order, just a means of destabilizing Europe. They prefer to weaken western nation states where the middle class is robust and only desire strong regimes where the population is accustom to oppression (China). British/European involvement with Islam is about maintaining soft control over China's energy supply, which they intend to be the model of the future. They do not want and will not allow an Islamic takeover of the power in these states, but are just bidding their time until China can replace the US as the proxy power of the financial system.

4. I haven't heard anything about India vs Pakistan+China in a while. Did they chill out or did the media just stop covering it? If the latter, how likely is it go to hot?

Hillary is pretty much finished. She isn't going to run again and shouldn't have this time - not healthy enough.

Obama doesn't have the authority to do much of anything at this point. The government has not been complying with him for a couple years now.

WW3 was never really on the table.

Tensions between India and Pakistan are not real at the governmental level. US and Russia will never exchange nukes and likewise neither will India or Pakistan. It is a useful thing to deploy to strengthen loyalty to the state though. China and India have no strategic interest in war either - this is not the sort of thing nuclear powers will ever do.

The major shortcoming of the "alt-right" or any opposition banner du jour is that they don't have coherent positive policy, but simply reactionary positions. Would you or Three possibly reach out to them(i.e. Throw breadcrumbs to see where we go)?

4. Will you find more time to talk with us? I feel you're a positive person with a good message in my opinion

5. Has there been anything that has caught your attention since your Question Session?

There are many concerned with the status & well-being of Julian Assange & the Wikileaks organization as a whole, and I feel the longer they stall and put on this charade, the bigger the anger they will fuel.

Wikileaks is simply in a holding pattern until decisions are made about whether and, if so, how aggressive and widespread prosecution will be over the next few years.

Every single one.

what is your point? shits going downhill so we need to become self sustained? I meant like which stock to invest in. im new to these threads. i read like 30 of your posts in a previous thread

No, we do not believe the world is falling apart; to the contrary, we have bubbling optimism. You should continue to withdraw support for the prevailing regime in each way that you can for now though. Furthermore, the economy of the future will shift towards more personalized tangible production. These types of endeavors tend to be seen as luxury items today, but even modest reinvigoration of the economy will change that again - even living standards of the 1950s supported such widespread craftsmanship. The depression of the the last 50 years and limited disposable income has destroyed this type of activity, not efficiency of scale.

all it does when i watch anything is make me angry.
what the fuck is trumps end goal?

They do not have end goals. They are attempting to maintain control. The idea of a "new world order" is a psy-op. It is an old world order that is being guarded and propped up, not a vision for the future being worked towards.

I've asked twice now, once here and once in a much earlier thread, whether or not "BLIND, DEAD, GOD'S ENEMY" means anything to you. This is something I came across while researching things you had said in your first threads. I'd really appreciate an answer, but if you pass over my question a third time I will assume that it must be intentional and I will not ask again.

Yes. I've spoken about this topic in previous threads. For example, freemasons consider the blind to be dead and therefore abuse of them not sinful; we don't share this philosophy. Rather, we think of those who employ lampshades as god's enemy.

What would be your recommendations?

The best art and literature has concrete and well-defined purposes. Feelings as abstraction rather than abstraction as categorization has upended and destroyed the value being delivered to society from these segments.

A made a mistake on question #5.

1. Has there been anything that has caught your attention since your 9/11 Question Session?*
2. What are the more ambitious ideas in the future research you guys at Three are thinking about? Could you throw us a bone or two?
3. Is Three planning to get the public pumped up about possible ventures to force Trump to make better decisions in your favor?
4. What is your current thoughts about our school education? What does Three want instead of the current system? Any future and ambitious ideas you guys want to implement in terms of childhood learning 50-100 years from now?
5. Quantum computers: Could the public get it now or are there too many problems? What should we know about them that isn't known in the public?

1. Yes. We appreciate the appreciation of our open question sessions and encourage more direct participation, especially by those who have expressed such and perceive problems. We have more answers than they expect, and these are always on offer.
2. We've been working on the practicality of an interstellar mission as a vehicle for the robust spread of the American system of values throughout the world; sort of the inversion of an alien threat as a formal unifier - something that can promote productive global cooperation informally. Intermediate global scale projects like a space elevator we prefer to run as a strictly American enterprise until a robust middle and vision of productive nationstate is restored in a self-sustaining way.
3. We think he needs to learn from his mistakes a bit before he'll be ready to do big things, but we have the capability to turn around a faltering presidency and will provide it when he is ready to accept.
4. The two main problems with youth education today are that misbehavior is not punished (things like talking out of turn should be seen as animalistic intolerable behavior that a paddle fixes) and that if a student asks what is the point, most teachers can't give an honest answer. Inspiring imagination, coherent, tangible visions for a brighter future is how we address the second; the first can be addressed with a reintroduction of corporal punishment although we don't prioritize that in an environment designed to generate worker bees rather than individuals (the lack of hope and answer to why that reigns today).
5. They are not useful yet for anything but cracking encryption.

Do you think Trump will build the wall and do other iconic things he promised he'd do, or was it all memes to get him popularity? Will he go back on a lot of his promises? Did he seriously think he will win or was his entire campaign just an effort to boost his personal popularity/worth?

Something that most people don't appreciate is that Trump made his money in one of the most coddled and propped up by the state industries there is - real estate. Generally didn't fair well outside of this (casinos, fashion, golf courses, whatever). This is not a criticism though it may seem that way. The regime made the environment this way, not him. However, it does engender the perception that simpaton policy can generate great wealth.

If you think of someone like Elon Musk and his government subsidized enterprise, most people realize that Musk is a net destroyer of value or piggybacking in his enterprises - $100k electric cars are not economically rational, and his rockets were designed for free by NASA. Though less obvious, Trump's success is very similar (real estate is even more coddled than Musk) and he is susceptible to silly dogmatic thinking as a result - lower taxes engender growth, for example. In reality, the tax rate has nothing to do with growth; only the relative efficiency of government versus private spending determines whether taxes are pro or anti-growth. Even Trump would be forced to concede this if pressed intelligently; for example, government taxation for building a wall being pro-growth. The inability to internally articulate the distinction between generally low efficiency of government spending (a root cause problem) and taxes (which could be 100% with higher growth than we have now in principle) is the sort of thing that tells you he is in really far over his head.

Just so I get it out now in case it hasn't been brought up in any of the others: What seems to be the consensus among your circles regarding my country? Would you say it has great significance to the developments worldwide?

Not familiar with the blog.

Germany has been a great success for the regime in that they have maintained a competent workforce that is utterly demoralized. China has incompetent workforce that is demoralized, whereas the US has a semi-competent workforce always ready to be alight with hope and drive; the first is not particularly useful feedstock and the second very dangerous.

Germany has the potential to be crucial to great changes going forward if the fire can be brought back into their lives in a good way, i.e., Leibniz conspiring with the Scottish and Irish against the British Crown and in support of the American Enterprise.

If usury/interest (I know they're not synonymous) is evil and should be fought against, how will enterprises ever be created?

We don't consider interest as a risk weight to be usury or oppose institutions that pool capital for productive investment. It isn't hard to show that the interest rates are decoupled from risk assessments in the economy today, in other words, usury runs rampant and with intent. One of the most important things that can be done to combat this is a national banking system similar to what Washington set up.

3. Are the computers/tech we are currently using inefficient? Is there currently better computers/tech that haven't been put out in the public eye? I feel there is more than the upgrades PCmasterrace and PC geeks salivate over.

4. I feel that the current entertainment media is really lacking in anything of substance besides some thought provoking works. There is some progress in general towards more well thought out ideas, but not by much. Is the regime to blame for the lackluster in the mainstream entertainment or are people just not thinking at a good enough level to produce more phenomenal levels of work?

What is Merkel planning to do in the future?

How prevalent are isis cells throughout Europe?

Because globalism has often been called the new world order, people often have the misconception that there are grand plans and ambitions. It isn't the case. They are doing what is perceived as necessary in the short to medium term to maintain power. Merkel needs things like an immigration wave for the same reason as Obama; the natives are growing aware and restless. They are powerless to stop these waves however; the important thing with respect to their actions is to make it clear that extreme destruction to prevent the rising will of the people will be met with severe consequences, a reality that they are aware of and increasingly resigned to.

Yes, it will.

You would be stringing up a conductive tensile truss from the ground, THROUGH the charged portions of the earths magnetosphere.

I don't think you fully appreciate what kind of clusterfuck that would cause.

Not trying to be rude or anything, but space elevator is a REALLY dumb idea.

Also, the aforementioned airplane crash scenario.

Also, you didn't answer my actual question.

We intend to build an orbital ring at a few hundred kilometers. There is no requirement for tensile truss all the way to the ground with this design, nor of conductive material, it can be gapped along the way, and so on. These are not issues; you are imagining that thoughts on jews and their (((coincidences))) in general?

I've previously dealt with this topic, TLDR jews have growing influence but this is an effect rather than a cause of bad government. Historically they were pawns used for shadow taxing of the masses by the state and thrown under the bus as scapegoats, but the weakening of the nationstates means a strengthening of their former proxies. In much the same way, gangs, mafias, corporations and so on have growing influence.

You don't have a background in science, do you?

Coupling to the planet solves the transverse instability.

Something like kevlar is sufficient for a several hundred km long tether and not conductive, never mind the ability to gap between a hanging tether and elevated platform.

We have no intention of building the popularly conceived ~40k km tether held in place with a counterweight. See proposals by Tesla, Birch, etc.

How can the UK bring down the old royal power structure? Is it held together with pedo/degenerate blackmail like in the US? Can bringing to light the pedo stuff in US government help to bring light to British/ European high level pedo rings?

Can you tell us exactly how the Clintons were involved in the Twin Tower attacks and how they profited from it?

We will take care of this by taking the US government back from them as well as some other key proxies. The UK regime is held together in much the same way as the US regime as they are practically indistinguishable at current - blackmail rings, etc.

The Clintons were primarily involved on the domestic cocaine distribution networks that sent cash to Russia to buy off the mob, party leaders, etc., which facilitated a buying up of Russian assets. They made money both from skimming CIA cocaine profits and crony deals in buying up Russian assets after the USSR.

in the time it took me to post that and wait for the response i read through all of your previous threads that reddit bro posted, thank you for answering though. do you think racial identity is irrelevant in general? the way you talk it sounds like you can envision a utopia where people really wouldn't see color. but to me right now it does feel like jews tend to be sinister (or at least work more actively against the interests of humanity), africans are retarded, muslims are inbred, etc. is this important or am i just being an ignorant cynical fag?

There are vast differences around the world in realized potential, but very minimal in terms of genetic potential.

For example, you wouldn't expect the billion African babies with protein deficient diets and therefore sharply reduced IQs to produce many of the future great minds of tomorrow.

However, almost the entirety of difference is environmental. Unsophisticated analysis of the situation could easily lead one to incorrect racial assumptions, but these conclusions are the domain of limited minds seeking to imagine even more limited minds to feel make themselves feel better.

In this vein, we support temporary anti-immigration policies because something Trump says is right: the best are not the ones flooding over. You are dealing with desperate, uneducated, impoverished, poorly educated people in an environment where the existing public is barely treading water if that.

1 We could go on about this forever, but TLDR we don't see scientific basis for racism. Individual variation far exceeds group variation and comparable environments produce statistically insignificant variation among groups.

2 We have heavy hearts about a dark world, more so than most of you can imagine. The ability to act with agency can really only emerge from a deeply cynical and skeptical outlook, a mind that isn't tricked by the illusion of civilization rather than the reality of the law of the jungle. To perceive the gap between what is and could be is arguably even darker a perception than awareness of pedo rings and assassinations of dissidents, but does come with opportunity and a path forward rather than pure negativity.

Your body has legitimate uses for fluoride (teeth, for example). Most people overdose on it and you should take steps to moderate your intake, make sure you have ample iodine intake, make sure your diet is capable of decalcifying fluoride buildup in the brain (ie citric acid can cross the blood-brain barrier and is effective at decalcification). Its a shame....I am looking back at all of my notes and most of the questions that I have for you I have already answered myself lol.

A puzzle that I have not yet resolved, however, lies in history. I am trying to understand how the Roman Empire fell.

Can you point me to any proper historical works for me to answer this question. In particular the period of time from 400-1000 AD has many conflicts (at least from the official chronological events).

For example, I indicated months ago that there are duplication of events. Some historians refer to them as "phantom duplicates" based on conflicting chronologies. So as an example, you see accounts of historical figures and 300 years later you see the same events.

Can you help me with anything regarding this front?

Much of this confusion arises from the period being highly volatile. We created Islam to inject a warrior mentality into Christendom against the influence of Paul/Roman branch that was taking root.

I would like to first apologize with regards to the last thread. I had been reading something prior to that thread that confused me. An AC article entitled the "Jesus Myth". It appears it was intended to showcase a high level deception story that is circulated within insider circles. I should have paid greater attention to the header. It made it seem like Jesus was working with the Davidic family to restore their dominance of Jerusalem and that Jesus was nothing more than an archon of the demiurge. It flipped the entire story on its head.

Based on what you were saying before, was Jesus a member of your Group? Would that make David the conspirator alongside the family and the Disciples mere symbolic representations of the archons of the Demiurge?

Jesus was one of us, yes.

As to the bloodlines, it is symbolic. The merger of the house of Judah and Levi through Mary and Joseph represent worldly and spiritual power combining and therefore the common thread that has been presented throughout here: the acquisition of agency and use of it for good.

Can you tell me exactly how old their order actually is?

I have examining what certain climactic points throughout history that indicate the doing of these families.

Such points would include:> Glorious Revolution of Britain> Dutch Empire (special emphasis on East Dutch India Trading Company)> Republic of Venice> Switch of Leadership around the time of the coming of the Flavian Dynasty.

Were Herod Agrippa and Herod Agrippa II members of this order?

The central dogma that we oppose, the willful concealing of knowledge, specifically that of consciousness and agency, has been the main tenet of an order that has persisted although not always robustly for about 4000 years. Much of the ideology beyond this has shifted throughout the ages as well as prominent families within the order. Agrippa was a member as were most rulers for some time prior and since.

I have a few more history based questions and then I am going to switch to other topics. There is still much confusion with regards to the period of history spanning from 300 CE to 400 CE. I still do not fully understand the entire picture of how Rome fell as most of this time is a major clusterfuck.

Take for example the following excerpt:> It is said, that weakened by illness, Diocletian (the Roman Emperor who ruled from 284 to 305 AD), RETIRED and left his palace on the Dalmatian coast to go tend to his VEGETABLE GARDENS!

I don't know about you but that sounds like complete bullshit to me. Why would an Augustus Caesar quit his job to be a farmer?

Can you tell me what happened to Diocletian? Is there a conspiracy here somewhere and history has been re-written?

You are largely observing the same game that is played by switching between red and blue presidents today. Imagine coming across the TL;DR of presidential politics 2008-2016 a thousand years from now. Racist country elects black dude followed by guy who questions whether he was even legally allowed to run. Huh?

These sorts of things are, as you have noted, dead giveaways of the old order in the midst of chaos and attempting to control an unruly population.

I ask this because you said last time that Islam was the creation of your group and was intended to combat the Growing Romanized version of Christianity.

By my research Islam truly begins with the Arian heresy. This would then mean that Arius was most likely a member of your group and that you were actively trying to break apart the empire.

Christianity itself was our primary attack on the empire. We work primarily through ideas that are compelling enough to spread on their own merit, what you might call meme magic.

2. Is pizza gate just a huge reach or are we onto something with the Moloch cult angle?
3. How do your colleagues feel about the kek worship that goes on here?
4. Can you give us some info on how deep Soros's roots are inside our party system?
5. Lastly, how the fuck did Trump win when the opposition had globalist support?

I hope you stay safe man, the QnAs y'all do on here gives us a great reassurance sometimes.

1 Trump presidency has the potential to create a one party state (reversing demographic trends, neutering all but the most extreme identity politics issues by transforming the GOP, etc.) which is a very bad outcome for the old order. To this end, very vigorous and ongoing efforts to keep the party split going will be taken.

2 You are on the right track

3 Again, on the right track in a more significant way than you think. By making a game out of your awareness of "meme magic" it becomes a fun and energetic process. This sort of thing acts as a force multiplier when you are trying to push change via the 100th monkey effect.

4 Soros is a very high level player. Beyond this you have only more shadowy but known players (major banking houses, "figurehead only" crowns, multinational CEOs) and finally the old order.

5 The population is far more awake and angry than you think. They suffer from mass ignorance, bewilderment as to where to go from here, and so on, but are not stupid and very much aware that things are not right or even close.

Christianity is, symbolically, the inversion of the old world order; the antithesis of the US regime. It is a first of its kind religion in this respect and of utmost significance to world history. You should know and be familiar with the Bible but it has been manipulated, pruned, incorrectly taught, and so on. The two biggest groups in the CIA are overt British loyalists and Mormons (a religion created by the British). Many of the rank and file (Mormons, and some others that are not pro-British) are strongly against the Chinese model for ethical reasons, although at the higher level (Romney) you see a recognition of British interests and an expression of things that only make sense in the context of Anglophilia like the anti-Russian rhetoric or selling of weapons secrets to the Chinese (by the Clintons), or double-crossing the Russians (Bush Sr.) and cratering their economy after they agreed to dissolve and work as partners rather than Cold War adversaries. whelp, I'm convinced.

I know you have a lot of questions, but do you have any suggestions for people who are part of the general population? Like, tips on how to navigate the tumultuous waters going forward?

We suggest that in addition to trying to unravel conspiracy like pizzagate and the like that you add an additional prong to your arsenal: seek to demonstrate opportunity and let the gap between our potential and the realized state of affairs serve as a proof of conspiracy to those who are less aware. You can show people that there is something deeply wrong by giving them hope which we all need to cope with the darkness that is real.

The old order is composed of conscious individuals who seek to limit the extent of consciousness, maintain a slave / unthinking class beneath them. We disagree with this secrecy and limitation and seek general enlightenment, cooperation, and progress of all people.

Hey HLLanon, it's the Reddit bro from the previous session.

1. What is Three's thoughts on the current state of the Internet?
2. What policies/changes would you make for Internet if Three was able to take full control of the US? (Ads, Net Neutrality, ISPs, etc) Please 4-6 sentences.
3. Regarding Pizzagate and the research being done by it, on scale of 1-100, how deep has the research team on reddit/voat gone in your opinion? This is assuming Three is watching closely.

Under threat and already highly compromised.

We'd like a cessation of the massive sock puppet programs, cointelpro type operations, etc. The internet and open dialogue on a content rather than personality driven basis is highly important to our progress.

I'm encouraged that you guys are getting out there in the real world, taking photos, doing hard intelligence gathering. This is not stalking or whatever you may be scared to believe, it is real people living their lives. Keep it up, but don't be consumed by the darkness; spend at least as much time devoted to opportunity and progress as you do to unraveling evil.

You've spoken of an old world order in a lot of your threads. You also hint to a new world order. Is this the same kind of nwo people see all over youtube and other random conspiracy theory sites? Are there multiple new world orders, like the old world order is bad, some new world orders are also bad but there is an option that is a truly good option?

Most people are aligned with us on a moral basis. That being said, we did start things like the Illuminati that are widely regarded as the "new world order" and also believed to be bad. We don't run any sort of "illumati" organization today; it was simply a psy-op we ran on the masonic order to make the American revolution possible. The regime that people oppose is what I refer to as the old world order.

No, I am not threatened by the old regime. Many of them perceive us as a threat, but they are incompetent and need to be replaced for their own good. We're less interested in them than the gap between mankind's potential and the pitiful current state of affairs. That's a personal choice. Any way to help avoid that, other than try and talk to the opposite side?

You need to become agitators in favor of concrete alternatives. No need to upend the whole game on your own. Inspire interest in something that is already technically achievable like a space elevator, putting pressure on the government to create trillions and trillions of novel wealth and thereby relieving pressure on the middle class. Successful agitation of such a project can even preclude a financial crisis by removing all doubts about US solvency, avoids all partisan pitfalls, and so on.

I suppose it makes sense as initially Islam was very intellectually based and expanded upon much of the ancient Greek teachings but it quickly turned into an abhorrent abomination.

Can you tell me what year / event is the turning point when you begin to loose control of Islam?

We didn't ever "control" either Christianity or Islam. We have throughout history injected big ideas like this and to a lesser extent stories, parables, artistic works, etc., as blunt and imperfect instruments to nudge mankind in the right direction. It is only in the modern era that we could conceive of programmatic seizure of power with the ability to leverage scientific ability to overcome our inferior numbers.

accordance with the will of the Spirit. The seventy-two luminaries themselves made three hundred sixty luminaries appear in the incorruptible generation, in accordance with the will of the Spirit, that their number should be five for each.> "The twelve aeons of the twelve luminaries constitute their father, with six heavens for each aeon, so that there are seventy-two heavens for the seventy-two luminaries, and for each [50] [of them five] firmaments, [for a total of] three hundred sixty

Agency is your ability to act unencumbered by others. Can you videotape your neighbor beating his wife and initiate proceeding to stop this? Probably so. Can you do the same of Podesta abusing a child? Probably not without being assassinated unless you are very clever about how you obtain the proof and deliver it to the public. Will their be any major ISIS attacks in the next couple of months?

The terrorism meme is something the old world order would very much like to drop at this point.

Did you read the news about the fire in Gatlinburg? A couple of kids with a dollar of matches did more damage than any so-called terrorist act.

There are a couple important things to draw from this.

One, terrorism isn't real. It is trivial to do massively more damage than any so-called terrorist attacks have.

Two, awareness of this fact is penetrating into the public psyche. People are increasingly aware that a small group of individuals are capable of tremendous force multiplication, which has the potential to cause a cascade of individuals attaining agency and therefore dealing a deathblow to the old order.

No. People generally mistake the ambitions of the old world order. The globalists, or old world order, never had in their ambitions a singular global governing body. One illusion that will disappear in short order is the idea that free speech exists as a matter of law.

As it stands today, the majority of the population is what you might call purple pill.

They believe in systemic conspiracy but also nonsensical myths like remnants of a free press ("alternative media").

Such notions are immediately debunked by entertaining ideas like being a space elevator. We have and have had the technological capacity to do this for decades and therefore the ability to drive 20%+ annual GDP growth, yet you see no talk of this in any of the vast swaths of "real/alternative" media. The existence of forums like this encourages people to believe in nonsense ideas like free speech still exists under the law.

Most people are not aware of the difference between esoteric judaism and the more ordinary religious sort.

You could describe the old world order as esoteric jews. They believe in the vengeful god, arbitrary punishment, concealment of knowledge, the disunity of the people (tower of Babel), and so on.

The state of Israel in the middle east is not important to esoteric judaism, but the maintenance of the old world order is.

You shouldn't worry yourself with the EU. It will continue to fall apart. Their constitution is untenable and the rise of nationalism is in part a result of widespread awareness of this by the people there.

The way you've described your view of Christianity in the past seems very gnostic. It is my understanding that Christianity at its core is sacramental in the sense that it uses physical means to describe spiritual realities. In Christian theology a human being is a unification of physical and spiritual, but the spiritual side of us is like a set of invisible muscles and must be exercised from man to become aware of their existence. Gnosticism seems to teach that there is a disunification between flesh and spirit. The dualism taught in esoteric Christianity, in my understanding, is flawed because of that. You seem to point to a theology of pure symbolism, which in my (perhaps limited) understanding would negate the role and function of the physical side of the sacramental aspect of the teachings. Am I wrong? Can you please elaborate on your version of Christianity?

That's basically correct. We don't subscribe to ideas like the death of Jesus as a sacrament to wash the sins of the masses. Instead, what the story is telling you is that Jesus remained at the crossroads of the enlightened / conscious and the masses until his death, that he was perfect in the sense that he never gave into the old world order, was not compromised and refused to compromise.

Are the masses being trained to blow all their money on material goods to fill voids and want nothing substantial?

Happy New Year

This sort of thing doesn't require training.

The extremity of the behavior has more to do with the strict prohibition on more fulfilling things. People who pursue spiritual enlightenment, technological advancement, are able to articulate a better world, and so on, are actively gang stalked, imprisoned, assassinated, or whatever is deemed necessary to prevent the masses from becoming free.

Meaningless distraction seems to be all there is because meaningful life is strictly prohibited by the regime.

Thanks HLI! Loved the posts so far.

1) Why do you use "your government"? Is that a sign of attaining agency (i.e. you don't feel control by them hence they are not "my" government?)

2) Are you American? Did you study in Europe? (ties into above - US flag, American English spelling, using "your government")

3) What do about taxes? How can I starve the beast...? (don't say move to cash & artisan work - I create/buy/merge software companies and sell them after improving them)

4) Best place to invest $1MM? (given your expected summer crash)

5) Is Three like the families running the world (Warberg, Marlborough, Rothschild) - except you are good?

6) Are these families aware of you? What are they doing to try and stop you?

7) Why not target them directly? Getting consciousness rising in population is great, but can't you just cut off the head of the snake? Target them at their private British schools? Direct cull of their offspring... Kill their perceived "royal" lineage.

8) More on gaining agency please. Reading the Jaynes book now but would love more direction.

9) What's the next book I should read? Would understanding symbols/occult be useful? If so, which book?

10) It seems there are questions we are not asking, yet you will not direct explicitly (don't give the child more than he can handle...). Which direction should we pursue? What topics? Help us help ourselves please.

11) Why the paradox references? Anything to do with AI? (traditionally used as AI tests - should I ask if you're AI? Can AI lie? are you a liar?).

12) Tripped balls over WestWorld finale with all the consciousness tie in. Not a question I know but I had to say...

I think I found my direction in life :) Agency to the people! Remove the control systems that people are blind to! We are controlled by sick minds (although I understand they may see themselves as the saviors of humanity). It is so obvious we have identity politics as a divide and conquer strategy (keep the conquered divided)!

You've mentioned secret societies being a part of the OWO. What is the role of secret societies like the Freemasons and Thelemic organizations like the A.'.A.'. and the Temple of Set in all of this? Are 100% of secret societies aligned with the OWO, the punisher god, and top-down control of humanity? Or do some have other purposes?

Small benign secret societies exist. Simple pagans in Christian dominated countries many years ago were at risk if their real beliefs were known, for example. None of this is particularly relevant to the state of the world however.

As far as active societies (rather than mere outcasts), there are basically only two: the masonic order, and us. Everything is an outgrowth of one or the other.

â€œ[W]hy James Madison decide to establish the Second National Bank of the United States?

Wasn't he opposed to the first bank? Weren't banks the epicenters of British influence in the early USA? What were the primary geopolitical struggles of the United States during the 19th century? Why did Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton sabotage each other if their political interests aligned?

If the Second National Bank of the United States was insulated from British influence, then did Andrew Jackson's role require him to destroy the national bank so British-controlled state banks could restore influence over the country's economy, protect Southern raw materials, and hamper the competing American industry?

How much influence did you have over the revolutions of 1848? Was there a universal goal? What stopped the social upheaval of the 19th century from enacting real change? Was Marx part of the three? Bakunin? Any other famous thinkers? Why did the liberty movements fail?â€

Finished with the questions from Reddit... Here are my questions:

1. Last time, I was talking on the topic of the Internet. On Net neutrality, Internet rules, and the ISPs. What are your thoughts towards them? Are they simple things to take care of to Three? What changes would we see regarding them?
2. Help me to understand Internet speeds and ISPs better. I know that a large part of the US has pretty slow speeds (in comparison to other countries/regions) and we know we are capable of speeds of 1gb or even 10gb. But what are some things that we don't know about the Internet that Google and other ISPs/tech companies aren't telling us? Are we capable of more? What has Three uncovered or even has in store on this topic (i.e. Internet infrastructure)?
3. Is satellite internet useless or is it largely untapped (as in, it's the future but no steps towards it)? I know Elon is planning to send a bunch of satellites into space, but a lot of technology watchers know something is fishy with his proposed plans on that front. 4000+ satellites seem way too much to accomplish satellite internet.
4. What does a true internet discussion board look like or is even supposed to look like? Is the 4chan format the nearest one to it? I know that Reddit and it's upvote/downvote system can be good for sharing "popular" stuff but it's terrible for discussions besides specific threads/posters.

Elon Musk is a lot like Newton. No ideas of his own. Made into a celebrity to distract the pseudo-intellectual class from actual progress a la alchemy.

Net neutrality is a reasonable demand in return for the state-sanctioned monopolies that internet providers get.

4chan's design is pretty good. You have issues with sliding, but it is better than outright burying.

8. What do you make of the R&D of implants in the brain or headsets to allow people to control robotics and use computers with their mind? Will everyone have implants/headsets in the future?

12. Can you tell me how Three will handle landfills, waste, and recycling? Are there any applications you have in mind with it?

Recycling is an important issue, especially flushing nutrients into the ocean from farmland / human waste. Going forward it is important to redo the resource chain and limit dispersal as well as begin recycling landfills. We have technology to thoroughly deal with these things but they are energy intensive and wouldn't be reasonable to implement until we move to much higher energy throughput as a civilization (coming soon).

Would a 90-year-old man be able to reverse the process of damage through the medical procedures to look and be like a young adult or would there be an age limit (i.e. 25-60yrs)?

Yes, there is no reason for fluoride to be in the water.

The main thing you need to worry about when it comes to diet is not so much the form of your calories but that you get all the right nutrients. Things like iodine deficiency are real and extremely harmful. Take care of these issues and you can eat all carbs or all meat for calories and it won't make much difference.

A lot of the dysfunction you see is imposed on a societal wide level. Innovation and thinking for yourself is highly disruptive behavior to the old order. Companies are run for profit, but not so much for production and efficiency. There is virtually no substantial market competition in the world today.

There is no reason to allocate the earnings of some to others, especially when you have a competent government. However, we think that the fruits of the commons should be equally distributed to the masses.

The banking system should be approximately what Hamilton set up.

No, that is not what is going on. Trump got in way over his head. Ideas like tinkering with tax levels are really insignificant in the grand scheme of things. There are major systemic structural problems that have to be addressed.

In order to be a successful president, you need far reaching, deeply and carefully crafted plans. Management skills is nothing without a vision, but Trump actually convinced himself at one point that good presidents and good CEOs were basically the same thing.

I recently took a philosophy class on "the mind, brain, and self" and I feel as though I was lied to.

The scope of the lie seems too grandiose though, as if all of the contemporary philosophers included in our readings are in on the conspiracy of the old world order.

Why does David Chalmers go on Ted-Talk and spout bullshit? It seems like he's purposely lying, and knows exactly what consciousness is.

Why do they pretend the 'explanatory-gap' or the disability to 'describe subjective experience' is something that is completely ending the discussion of consciousness?

I guess what I'm asking is:

Are guys like David Chalmers purposefully deceitful or are they genuine in their writings?

No, you are right - there is systemic, organized conspiracy to brainwash the masses away from conscious awakening.
